THE BABBLER.

He Talks About You and the Things You Say and Do, in a Purely Personal Way.

BY MORRIS JONES.

"Did ye ever meet ol' Buzz, o' the team of Buzz and Fuzz? I ran into the ol' gentleman this mornin' and he was pullin' a jib jus' like a kid what had its milk bottle swiped and wuz tryin' to decide in its infantile mind whether or not the proper thing would be to bust into tears."

"What was Buzz's trouble?"

"O, he wuz jus' nachally hurt, as he expressed it, at the high bindin' methods in vogue in the vaudeville profesh. I tried me bes' to escape his gabby noise, but the ol' codger backed me plumb up in a corner and unloaded his thirteen inch guns o' discontent on me helpless head.

"He wuz wailin' and 'nashin' his teeth, claimin' by all the Gods on High Olympus that it wuz simply scandlous the way the brothers in his profesh copped his original stuff.

"'This season,' says Buzz, 'I starts out with a bran' new act, all clean material that had never seen the light o' high heaven, with a couple o' original songs and some o' the dandiest little comedy ye ever chortled over.'

"'Yes,' I said, with weariness in me voice. I had been doin' nuthin' all mornin' 'ceptin' to listen to tales o' woe from a bunch of guys what were over twenty-one but who acted as if they hadn't passed the seven year ol' stake. They make me sick with their blubberin' and groanin'.

"So, feelin' as I did, there wusn't a great deal o' sympathy comin' to him from me. I sort o' ducked the issue, as the political speakers put it, when referrin' to their opposin' candidates habit o' slidin' over the glossy bits in their careers.

"But you couldn't stifle ol' Buzz with an ax. He had me pinned on the mat, with both shoulders touchin' and the ol' mut knew it.

"'Did ye hear me sing that dandy little ditty, entitled "Why Werk Fer a Livin' When Ye Know the Route to Vaudeville?" Ye did? Well, it wuz some song, wusn't it? I guess yes. One o' the best little numbers that ever came down the ol' pike-road.'

"'Hub,' I said, not intendin' to commit mesel' foolishly over one o' them dub songs that some hard werkin' hack dashes off in between bites o' a sandwich.

"'Well, I wuz playin' one o' the Nearsighted Houses on Fifth Avenue las' week—me and me pardner—and through the hatred o' the marager o' the house I wuz put on first, though you know I've got an act that has the most o' them top-notchers skinned a mile when it comes to a showdown.

"'Right after the openin' matinee on Monday, I had jus' washed up and spread meself in me regular walkin' clothes, and had blew into the front o' the house to watch a few o' the other turns on the bill.

"'Long about the sixth number the headliner fer the week blows on and I kin hardly believe me eyes, but he dashes inter me pet little number, the one I referred to, "Why Werk fer a Livin' When Ye Know the Route to Vaudeville?"

"'Now, ye know as well as me that I ain't the kickin' kind, but it sort o' makes me feel like chewin' through a two inch iron bar when I bump inter somethin' o' this sort.

"'So I hot foots it after the manager and lays down me little kick. He assumes one o' them bored airs, leans himsel' up agin the brass railin' runnin' around the back o' the orchestra, and says nuthin'.

"'Don't ye think I'm entitled to the sole use o' this song, Mr. O'Cue?' I asts him, as he stands there, twirlin' his thumbs in the mos' aggravatin' manner imaginable.

"'Well, Mr. Buzz, he finally condescends to say to me, ye know Mr. Starlite is a big noise on this bill, and if he wants to use the number, I can't see that we have any kick comin' about it.'

"'Yes, Mr. O'Cue, but ye don't understand that it's my song, written fer me special, and no one's supposed to toss it over but yours faithfully. It's my song and I paid fer it with my coin. How about that?'

"'He jus' gives me a laff and wanders away to talk it over with the head usher.

"'By this time Starlite had finished the song and gets a rattlin' big hand fer it. This only makes me sorer than ever. But knowin' I haven't got a chancet in the wide-wide, I buttons up me paddock and vamps out inter Broadway and beats it to the music publishers.

"'I didn't get no more satisfaction outen them than I did outen the manager. They gave me the same line o' dope that it would help the number by havin' a couple o' live ones sing it. I swallowed this insult and beat it quick.

"'Now, wouldn't that sort o' disturb yer balance?'

I said as how I reckoned it might throw me slightly out o' plumb.

"'But that isn't all. Three weeks ago me and Fuzz wus playin' a fill-in week in New Shell. Upon that dinky bill o' course we wuz sort o' important. They had five acts on the bill and we played fourth. The openin' team on the programme wuz a a couple o' hicks, and by Wednesday I caught that rat who played the straight in this act coppin' all my best wheezes and lines, trimmin' them up a little bit different fer his own turn.

"'I tell ye it didn't take me no hour an' a half to search him out, and findin' that windy arguments didn't phaze him, I jus' los' me temper and walloped him a couple o' steam-shovel welts that made him think he wuz in grand opery. After the trimmin' he got out my stuff and went back to his own moss eaten rubbish.

"'Yes, but didn't he make a boller about the lickin' ye gave him?'

"'Sure, he had me pinched, and it cost me ten bucks and three fifty costs fer the pleasure of hangin' one or two good stiff kicks on his pass.'

"'Wuz he a big man?'

"'No, not so very big. About three inches smaller than me; but I'd a licked the tar outen him if he had weighed a ton.

"'Mebbe so,' I said.

I tried to edge away from this terrible mauler o' a comejian, but he wouldn't have it.

"'Say, Babbler, ol' pal, can't ye get yer editor to take up this subjec' and sort o' agitate it so's the profesh can get a line on the dope that a couple o' live writers are layin' fer the snide that pinches yer stuff?'

"'Run away and get yer aeroplane ready fer flight, yer gittin' airy in the upper strata,' I says to him, and I makes a final effort to duck outen his reach.

But nary a duck would he stan' fer.

"'Now listen to me, like a good fellah, won't you? Ye don't know what it means to us fellahs that are werkin' hard fer a bite to eat and nine or ten suits o' clothes a year. Help us lay them down.

When he pulls that one over, I sort of remembered all o' a sudden that he had been mixed up in somethin' o' the same kind o' thing before, only as I recalled it, he had been on the reverse end of the matter.

"'How about the time they accused ye of swipin' the meat outen the song layout of Flivvers and Flap?'

"'O, that wus entirely different, he says, as bold as the worst villain ye ever saw on the stage. The stuff I used I thought wuz deadwood, that it wuz any man's property that had the nerve to kick in an' cop it out. that had the nerve to kick in an' cop it out.

"'Yes, but what happened to ye?'

"'Well, if ye mus' know, a couple o' nearsighted managers canceled me time when they found I wus doin' it, though they were a couple o' lowbrows that didn't like me personal.'

"'Oh, ho!' I said, 'so that's how the land lays. Ye think ye hev a right to cop someone else's dope, but the good patron saint of actors mus' pertect yours from the contaminatin' touch o' infringement. Gwan with ye, yer as sensible as the rest o' the geezers that peddle comedy goods.'

"Then I left him, when he wusn't watchin' close.

"Now, wouldn't it start a leak in yer keel the way these noise merchants chirp and carry on? It make me mad and happy at the same time.

"It never occurs to these entertainment folks that if they'd exercise a little common sense once't in so often they wouldn't be up against it with their troubles all the time."

"'For instance?' I ventured to say.

"Well, what on earth are our copyright laws fer, if it isn't to keep pirates from grub stakin' somethin' you've nailed down fer yer very own?

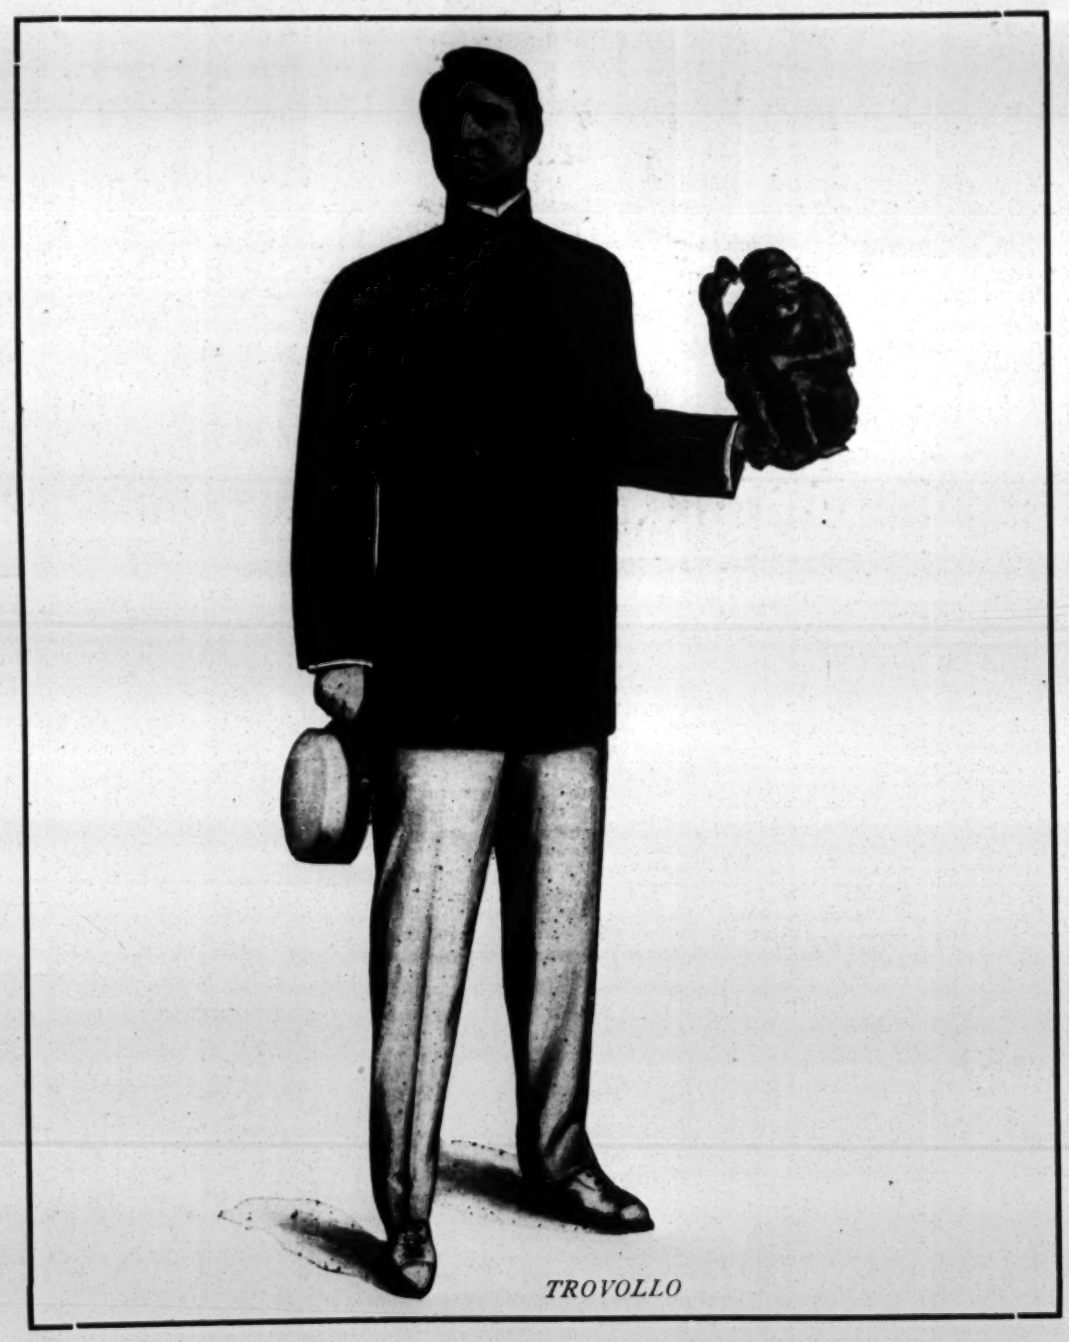
"Some day, some wise mike is goin' to build up a nice little business runnin' a day nursery fer these gentle little lambs that can't keep their own wool from streakin' right in their baby blue lamps.

"Instead o' risin' up and doin' the thing that anyone with a grain o' sense in their think-block would do—copyright their stuff, they go around the country raisin' cain because they sit with their hands folded and somebody helps themselves while the pickin's good."

"They might follow the lead o' that star soubrette who wus goin' to have a certain headliner pinched for coppin' her prize baby song, a couple of weeks back,' I said.

"Yes, they might. But they won't. They're so used to havin' someone else do their thinkin' fer them they can't begin to realize that self-preservation ain't no new motto.

"I wouldn't raise a finger to pertect such guys. Give me the guy with the dome filled with gray gravy and you'll not find him complainin' about anybody, pinchin' his red beets. Not on yer natural. They think, and after thinkin'—they act."



TROVOLLO

SPALDING SAILS.

Albert Spalding, the American violinist, was surrounded by his numerous admirers and friends last week, who went aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm II to bid him bon voyage and good luck upon his departure for Europe.

The Spalding party that sailed was composed of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Spalding, Mrs. M. J. Boardman and Albert Spalding.

He opens the season of 1910 at Paris, and later on will play at Berlin, St. Petersburg, Athens and Cairo.

THREE BELASCO PRODUCTIONS.

David Belasco will very soon make the first of the three productions, which, in conjunction with "Is Matrimony a Failure?" now at the Belasco Theatre, will constitute his contribution to the dramatic season of 1909-10.

These productions will be a new American play by Eugene Walter, the name of which has not yet been decided upon, in which Mr. Belasco will present Charlotte Walker; a political play, by William C. De Mille, "The Machine," and one by Belasco, his first since "The Girl of the Golden West." The Belasco play is an adaptation from the French. The personnel of the company will represent another subdivision of what is known as the David Belasco Co., the first column of which is now playing "Is Matrimony a Failure?" and other sections of which are to appear in the Walter and De Mille plays.

DOROTHY ARVILLE'S NEW ACT.

Dorothy Arville appeared in her new act, by Jack Mason, at the Family Theatre, Gloversville, N. Y., week of Oct. 25. Miss Arville works in one, with her own special plush drop, back of which is a picture sheet.

PANTAGES IN OMAHA, KANSAS CITY AND SALT LAKE CITY.

A. Pantages has completed arrangements whereby he will open houses in the three above named cities.

"THEY LOVED A LASSIE."

B. C. Whitney presented his new musical farce, "They Loved a Lassie," at the Whitney Theatre, Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 23, for the first time in America. They play was well received by a good house. Mr. Whitney will open with it in Chicago, at the Whitney Theatre, Oct. 31.

CLARA PALMER ENGAGED.

The Shuberts have engaged Clara Palmer for one of the principal roles with William Norris, in the English musical success, "The King of Cadonia," which is rehearsing at the Casino.

ANOTHER 'FRISCO VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

A communication from San Francisco reports the leasing of the Northwest corner of Haight and Cole streets, that city, owned by Mrs. Baird, to D. Hallahan and M. J. Gets, for a term of twenty-five years, at a rental aggregating $250,000. The property has a large frontage of 226 feet on Haight Street, by a depth of 120 feet in Cole, and the lessees, who are well known theatrical men, intend to immediately improve the corner, 100x120 feet, with a modern class A theatre, which will be devoted exclusively to high class vaudeville, under their own personal management.

The building is to be strictly class A in every respect, absolutely fireproof and having every facility in the number of easy exits. It will be of Moorish design, a story and a half in height. The stage is to be provided with everything of the latest in a mechanical way. It is promised that the structure will be completed and ready for business by the holidays.

The location is served by numerous car lines and surrounded on all sides by a large population.

A SOAP BUBBLE ACT.

Happy Andy W. Handy and Emily Handy Peare re-appeared on the stage last week at the American Music Hall, New Orleans. They are doing a comedy sketch, and introducing a novelty in the form of a soap bubble act.

Handy blows large bubbles that are bounced around on hand and elbows as a punching bag: then cut in two, forming two smaller ones which are then halved, making four small bubbles floating over the audience bursting when the breeze hits them.

A large bubble full of cigar smoke, juggled over Mr. Handy's head and then bursted, leaves a trail of smoke.

The most marvelous trick is the cutting of a large bubble filled with smoke and the joining of the parts without a particle of smoke escaping. In the seesaw stunt on a string the bubble rolled up and down the twine without bursting.

Mrs. Handy entertains the audience with vocal selections.

BENEFIT FOR EVELYN HOWARD.

A benefit for Evelyn Howard, a chorus girl in "The Motor Girl" company, who is in a hospital in Washington, D. C., as a result of wounds from bullets, fired by her husband, Wm. H. Short, on Oct. 24, will be given at the Belasco Theatre, Nov. 5.

THE NEWEST REMICK.

A son arrived at the home of J. H. Remick on Oct. 26.

TROVOLLO.

Trovollo, the American ventriloquist, first became famous by introducing a new idea in the ventriloquial line, entitled "The Military Encampment." In this act he represented a military officer and used a special set of scenery. Up to that time no special sets had been used in this line. The success of this act was proved by the fact that he was engaged for the Primrose & West Minstrels, and later was with Wm. H. West, and Hyde's Comedians. He filled a long engagement at the Palace Theatre, London, Eng., and also played South Africa. The cut shows Trovollo holding one of his talking simians which he is using in his new act, entitled, "Reincarnation, and Jingles and Jests at the Zoo," which he produced a year ago, but took it off as the dialogue was too local. Since then it has been revised and made more universal, and bids fair to become a bigger success than his first attempt, "The Military Encampment."

Anecdotes, Personalities and Comments,

CONCERNING

STAGE FOLK and Sometimes OTHERS

BY JOSEPHINE GRO.

Clicking off plays from a typewriter in a beautifully appointed "den" is far different from scouring the town for material to fill newspaper space—that's what Channing Pollock is now doing and previously what he did when new as a scribe. During that former time he picked up many a story from among the theatrical profession, and here's one that he tells about Joseph Herbert.

At one time that tall comedian was touring small towns with a company much less important than those with which he has been identified recently. On one occasion arriving late in a little place, he went to the first hotel in sight of the depot. Behind a table in a small office sat a youth—these two objects serving, respectively, as desk and clerk.

"Is this where I'm supposed to autograph?" asked Herbert of the lad.

"Autograph!" repeated the young man blankly, as if the word were a foreign one—which indeed it was to him.

"Yes," said the comedian, "autograph—register my name, don't you know."

"Oh, that's what you mean," said the clerk, bringing forth the necessary book, meanwhile his lips moved as if repeating the new word so as to impress it in his memory.

As the actor was seating himself for a long delayed quiet smoke, three typical countrymen entered the place with carpet satchels, and asked if there was a room "in the tavern" that all three could occupy. The clerk, informing them that such was the case, leaned jauntily over his desk-table, and with a wink in Herbert's direction, proceeded to make practical use of the new addition to his vocabulary.

"Will you gents autograph?" he said smartly.

Three blank countenances faced him for a silent minute, then simultaneously they looked at each other with a sudden mutual understanding as to what this phrase must mean.

"Sure," exclaimed the spokesman of the three, "mine's rye, but the other boys allus takes the kind made o' corn."

It was the clerk's turn to look blank, but he was game, and Herbert was invited to join them all at the little bar.

"That hifalutin word o' yours costs a feller somethin' to use," remarked he to the comedian, sotto voce.

To fill in a few idle weeks, George T. Marsh, according to a tale of Pollock's, press-agented for a little company touring little places. As there was a star in the aggregation of six or eight players, a calcium light was an important part of the stage necessities. This, with other baggage, was being unloaded at the depot, under the watchful observance of several of the townspeople—the idle sort that lingers around a country station at train time. The big tank immediately became the subject of conversation with a group, one of which was the local station master. Presently he detached himself from his friends and approached Marsh.

PERCY YARICK.

Percy Yarick, of Yarick and Lalonda, female impersonators, are playing a return engagement this week at the Manhattan Theatre, New York. They have eight complete changes of costumes. Their wardrobe ranks among the prettiest ever seen. The act has played around New York City for the past two years without a lay off. Their present contract calls for fifteen weeks at Mr. Gane's three houses—the Circle and the Manhattan, in New York, and the Victoria, Philadelphia.

"You ain't got that there tank in your wall picters aroun' town," said he, "an' we were a-wonderin' where it came in the piece you're goin' to act out to-night. Boys over there kinda want to know where it's a-comin' in. Some of 'em 'lowed you were a-goin' to sell sody water like the circuses do, but I told 'em I thought you were a-goin' to give it away with the show to draw a crowd—fer, you know, your kind o' bizness ain't very good in this town."

Then the press agent proceeded to explain to the inquisitive official the use of the tank, also informing him that the show would have to attract business on its own merits, and not depend on "free sody" or other "drawing cards."

Clivette, the entertainer by means of necromancy, juggling, shadowgraphing and the like, told an experience that occurred when at the head of his own company. It was an amusing illustration of one of the many subterfuges the lay person will employ in order to secure free passage through the entrance that guards every place of entertainment.

Clivette, on reaching a town where he was to "show" that night, had but a half hour to rest and dine before the performance, consequently did not feel like dividing with anybody a moment of that precious commodity called time. Scarcely had he seated himself at the dining table when he was informed that someone was waiting to see him. Rightly guessing that his caller belonged to that long list of "pass fiends," he sent out word that the man was to wait until he had finished his meal. Insistent, however, the caller was finally admitted to the dining room where Clivette was refreshing himself. The entertainer having grown somewhat used to this sort of visitor, was at this time rather short in his question as to the direct object of the latter, and asked him upon what claim he based his request for a ticket to the performance.

"Do you own part of the theatre?" was the entertainer's first question.

"Nope," was the laconic reply.

"Are you the sheriff or the constable?" was another question which the rustic made negative answer by a shake of the head.

"The mayor or the billposter?" queried Clivette, to which another "Nope" was the reply.

"Well, then," said Clivette, somewhat put out, for his dinner was fast approaching a cold state, "what right have you in asking for seats?"

"Why didn't you ask me thet before?" said the applicant for free admission. "I am the son of the man thet hauled the wood thet come from the ground thet was bein' cleared fer the feller thet sold the plot to the man that put up the op'ry house."

"You're evidently a direct descendant of the author of that world-wide piece of literature, 'The House That Jack Built,' observed Clivette, and for that reason alone will I tender you the courtesies of the house in which I play to-night—not because of the roundabout claim you put forth." So saying, Clivette handed the claimant the magical bit of paper that saves paying the price of admission.

Al. G. Belford, one of the principal comedians of the Moulin Rouge Girls Burlesque Co., got a big laugh a few nights ago with an interpolated line which was the outcome of the situation at the time.

He and his partner, J. Mack Belford, were doing a turn in "one," when a fuse blowing out, put the whole house and audience in the dark. The actors, however, continued their work in the dark, expecting the lights to go up immediately, which, however, they did not. Belford had reached the lines, "I am going away," which he is supposed to repeat so frequently as to cause extreme annoyance to his partner, who finally throws him to the floor with the exclamation, "Can't you say anything else but 'I'm going away?'"—all this time the house being yet in the dark.

"Yes, I can," was Belford's reply, to which his partner exclaimed:

"Well, then, say it."

Taking advantage of the humorous predicament—no light—Belford shouted, "Turn on those darned lights!"

This cue was unexpectedly taken up by the lights themselves, which simultaneously burst up all over the place, and right here was where Belford got an immense and unlooked-for laugh.

Pollock relates a story concerning Harry Luckstone, whose name is known to many a real estate dealer along the line of theatrical travel, the comedian's particular fad being the acquisition of country property. Land boomers, passing the word along the line, are always on the watch for his arrival at various towns where he may be playing, and he is never unwilling to go and look over any proposition that they may offer.

At one place Luckstone was met by appointment at the depot by a typical boomer, driving a "pair" attached to a buckboard. He was taken to see the "best site in town," the town having arrived only at the point of being laid out on a map—not a building in sight. The lot proved to be situated on the side of a steep hill, an advantage claimed by the boomer to be a great one, inasmuch as an exceptional view was thereby afforded.

"But one couldn't build a house on that strip—it's set up almost edge-wise," objected Luckstone, "and if you did, you'd have to reach it by airship. However, if you can possibly mention a single practical advantage that the lot possesses, I'll buy it."

Luckstone thought he had given the agent a poser, but the man quickly responded to the challenge.

"Advantage, good heavens, Sir—look at the grand drainage the place has."

HARRY H. LAMOUNT

For the past two seasons appeared with the Empire circuit attractions. Mr. Lamount is now in his ninth week with Billie Burke's new act, playing the part of the French artist in "The Models of the Jardin de Paris," supporting Carl Henry, who with a company of ten people has what is claimed to be one of the funniest acts in vaudeville. They are appearing at the Maryland Theatre, Baltimore, Md., week of Nov. 1.

GUSTAV AMBERG ARRIVES.

Gustav Amberg, the former director of the Irving Place Theatre, New York City, and the present representative of the Shuberts in Berlin and Vienna, arrived in New York last week. Mr. Amberg will remain in America for several weeks to complete negotiations relative to plays, the manuscripts of which he has brought with him. In addition to dramatic works, Mr. Amberg also brings with him the options for a number of the successful musical offerings.

ADAMS AND GUHL IN "PANAMA."

Adams and Guhl are meeting with great success starring this season in Rogers Bros.' success, "In Panama," under the management of Al. Rich. The show has been doing a big business on all stands of the Stair & Havlin circuit played thus far, and the management has provided good entertainment for these houses. The piece is booked for a New York appearance after the holidays.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

Clipper Bureau, 14 Leicester Street, Leicester Square, London, W. C.

OCT. 23.

You may take it that the structure of the Variety Exchange, commonly called "the combine," is now complete, on the lines laid down in these columns last week. But I do not think that performers need be panic-stricken—yet. It is foolish to suppose that a strong combination of managers could be possessed by an active spirit of benevolence toward performers. But the strength of the combination has to be proved, and I imagine that the members will not be eager to confront a test. The process of securing signatories has been difficult to a degree, and the finest diplomacy has needed to be employed in the assimilation of infinite jealousies. The Variety Exchange is an accomplished fact, but it is acutely sensitive, and a serious collision of interests might be fatal. In consequence, the determination of the dominant spirits is to go very slow till confidence is established.

An acrid and interesting quarrel is in progress between George Edwardes and The Westminster Gazette, a staid, old-fashioned estimable journal which is getting useful publicity from the row. Mr. Edwardes took exception to the tone of the criticism of "The Dollar Princess," which appeared in The Westminster, and declared that he thought it inexpedient for an adverse notice to appear in one column of a newspaper which, in another column, contained his advertisement. This produced a dignified rebuke from the editor, who protested strongly against the suggestion that his critic should be influenced by advertisement. Mr. Edwardes maintained that this was a misconstruction of his letter. He was not resenting "criticism." His complaint was addressed to what he regarded as willful unfriendliness of tone, and hypercritical fault finding. It is felt that Mr. Edwardes made a false move, that the editorial reading of his first letter was the accurate reading, and that the newspaper distinctly scores.

Sailing, with this letter, aboard the Mauretania, and in your midst ere these lines circulate, are Fred Ginnett and his wife, who are disposed to try their luck with the repertory of sketches in which they are vastly popular on this side. Fred Ginnett is the most prominent member of a family famous in circus history for three generations. The first Ginnett was a French soldier. The second, whose widow still lives, left a large fortune made in the brave days of tenting. Fred is his son. There are many other Ginnetts. The Fossetts and the Sangers are connected by marriage. Some years ago, Fred Ginnett came to the conclusion that the circus had seen its best days in England. With admirable ingenuity he adapted a number of circus pieces to vaudeville—for instance, "Dick Turpin," "Claude Duval," and "Rejected Re-mounts." His companions are to be met with in all the best vaudeville houses. Then he is associated with Frank Bostock in many show ventures. After the music hall strike, he was quite the peacemaker. Proof of his popularity is found in the fact that he is the King Rat this year. His wife, Isabel Ginnett is a fine horsewoman, and worthily supports him in all his undertakings. She is president of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, which does good work among the poor women of the profession.

We meet with a sordid lot of people in "The Little Damozel," produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Thursday night, and it is doubtful if clever acting and occasionally brilliant dialogue will reconcile the playgoer to the disagreeable qualities of the piece. It is the work of Monckton Hoffe, a newcomer to the London theatres, though he has had a good deal of experience in the provinces, as player and playwright. "The Little Damozel" was submitted to Charles Hawtrey, and so gripped his imagination that he arranged with Frank Curzon for the production of the play. He figures as Recklaw Poole, a sporty aristocrat, who has gone to the bad—warned off the turf and what not.

Recklaw's favorite resort is the bandroom of the Cafe Angeleque, Soho, a haunt of "Bohemians," and he takes an especial interest in Julie Alardy, a little favorite of the party, the "damosel" of the title. When it is suggested to Captain Partington, a wealthy aristocrat, that Poole shall marry Julie for a large monetary consideration, the worst qualities of the wastrel come out. He bargains, and at last agrees, the fact being that Partington is under nameless bonds to Julie, and wants to plant her, so that he may marry Sybil Craven, a distinguished beauty. When Sybil meets Recklaw the murder is out. They were engaged in better days. She bitterly reproaches him with his wasted life, his sordid marriage. Julie, who believed at this time at any rate she had met a good man, turns on Recklaw and refuses to live with him. He plans suicide. Then better councils prevail, and all ends happily. May Blayney is charming as the Damozel.

Florence St. John's inclusion in the cast of "The Merry Peasant," to be produced at the Waldorff, re-named the Strand Theatre, to-night, has been remarked with much interest. For some time the once prima donna assoluta of comic opera has appeared in drama and comedy, but she has not lost her singing voice, as to-night will surely prove. The point is that at the historic Strand Theatre, now demolished and replaced by a tube station, whose name the Waldorf has annexed, Florence St. John became famous years and years ago. This was the home of opera bouffe, where "Olivette" had its long run. The association of "Jack's" name with a new Strand Theatre has let loose a flood of memory. "The Merry Peasant," which was produced at the Mannheim Court Theatre in July, 1907, has meanwhile had a career of remarkable success through the continent of Europe.

Safe arrivals in town as the Sisters Kaufmann, Reba and Inez, who have been remarkably successful in Africa. They are off to the continent now.

"Ma Gosse," produced at the Palace Theatre on Monday night, is a thriller indeed. When it was inspected in Paris it was promptly declared to be impossible of translation. But J. N. Raphael has shown extraordinary ingenuity in preserving the style and sentiment of the original. The scene is a thieves' kitchen, to which a party of tourists, bent on seeing the low life of the city, is introduced. They see it with a vengeance. A tough and his "gosseline," or "kid," engage in the black dance, which for brutal passion leaves the Apache Dance out of sight. This is done by Gaston Silvestre and Edne Mollon. A second lover appears and makes a fierce attack on Bebert, the dancer. They fight, and Bebert falls with a knife in his back. The tourists flee the kitchen, shrieking in alarm. As they go they are stripped of all their valuables. Then, with shouts of laughter, the party in the kitchen flings off the disguises adopted to fool the visitors. The whole thing was a plant!

On Monday night "The Servant in the House" will be produced at the Adelphi. When this play has run its course, an adaptation of Conan Doyle's prize-fighting novel, "Rodney Stone," will be produced. It would be hard to find a greater contrast.

"Madame X" is shortly to be withdrawn from the Globe Theatre. The next production here will again exploit Lena Ashwell in the character of a woman with a past—as the heroine of Douglas Murray's play, "The Great Mrs. Alloway."

From Australia comes news of the death of Harry Shine, long established out there is a comedian. He was a brother of John L. and Wilfred Shine.

Hall Caine, the dramatist, has been ill in London, but hopes to get away immediately to his Isle of Man home, and recuperate.

A very clever skit of "The Whip" has been added to the programme of the Follies, who have promptly been enjoined not to do anything in infringement of the title of the Drury Lane drama.

Beerbohm Tree is constrained to admit the failure of "False Gods," which will be withdrawn immediately in favor of a revival of "Trilby." Still Sir Herbert declares that when he was afforded the opportunity of reading Brieux's beautiful play he felt bound to produce it. After a few performances of "Trilby" Sir Herbert will produce a play called "Beethoven," which has been successful in Paris, although it is lacking in love interest. It is concerned with the tragedy of Beethoven's deafness and with his antipathy to Napoleon. There is an ingenious accompaniment of music.

Sir Herbert Tree strenuously denies the rumor that he will play in vaudeville while "Pinkie and the Fairies" occupy his Majesty's stage at Christmas. It is quite true, none the less, that Sir Herbert had a very tempting offer to play vaudeville.

"Mr. Preedy and the Countess" has now been played two hundred times at the Criterion Theatre.

John Davidson, the dramatist who died by his own hand, proves to have left $1,600 and a will in which he deprecates any biography. He commands the destruction of certain plays.

Violet Vanbrugh has been "confessing" the method according to which she plays Claire Forster, in "The Woman in the Case." Her first impression was "what a revolting part;" so she got in all the comedy she could to lessen the distressing effect on the audience. When she is supposed to be drinking champagne she is drinking water—a whole quart nightly. She finds this, incidentally, most beneficial.

Henri de Vries is appearing at Wyndham's Theatre in a protean play, called "The Dumb Man's Curse," done in association with "Mr. Preedy and the Countess." He plays six parts, the central figure being that of a man who is led to suspect his wife, and whose fury is so great that it endows him with speech. The character of the wife is undertaken by Dorothy Drake, who is Mrs. de Vries.

Sadie Jerome, who retired from the stage when she married Mr. Herzberg, a South African financier, accepted an engagement at the Tivoli a while ago, but was discontented with the style of her billing and quit. She sued the directors for damages, but the court declared that the reservation of a right to bill Miss Jerome as they saw fit had been properly made by the directors. Miss Jerome got a little fresh with the judge and was ordered to leave the witness box.

Fred Day, of the music publishing firm, Francis, Day & Hunter, sails for New York to-day.

Lydia Yeamans is at the Coliseum this week, still singing "Sally in Our Alley."

Jessie Preston has had to undergo an operation, which has proved successful, though at one time her life was despaired of.

Lionel Regnold, a fine comedian, is to appear on the music hall stage in a condensed version of the farcical comedy with which he is associated—"What Happened to Jones." He opens at the Oxford on Monday.

More Russian dancers! Alfred Butt has engaged Mlle. Pavlova, claiming to be the most brilliant product of the Imperial Opera House, St. Petersburg, for the Palace Theatre. Mlle. Pavlova will have the assistance of sixteen dancers, but Mr. Butt wishes it to be known that he does not contemplate the production of a ballet.

Meanwhile, a troupe of "national" dancers from Russia will appear at the Palace on Monday, headed by Peschkoff, who made a perfectly sensational success in "'Round the World," at the Empire.

Ada Reeve comes to the London Coliseum after her pantomime engagement in the provinces.

Saturday afternoon performances have been successfully instituted at the Alhambra.

A "Raffles" sketch, written by E. W. Hornung, who created the character, is due at a West End hall immediately.

Maurice Farkoa, the French chanteur, who has so distinguished the George Edwardes productions of musical comedy, comes to the Hippodrome on Monday.

Morton and Elliott, who arrived by the Lusitania, begin a tour of the English provinces on Nov. 2.

Lottie Venne will "change her act" at the London Hippodrome on Monday, producing Charles Brookfield's sketch, "The New Regime."

Henri Gros, the well known director of variety theatres, mourns the loss of his wife.

Continued ill health induces Thomas Barrasford to resign his position as president of the Music Hall Home. He is succeeded by Walter de Frece.

William Lee and Helen Bentley have played "The King's Counsel" at the Oxford, with much success.

Louis Tracy, a smart "boy," on the order of Vesta Tilley, has just been engaged by Harry Rickards for Australia.

Carlton, the card manipulator, was invited to play Abanazar, the magician, in the Drury Lane pantomime, "Aladdin," but he cannot get out of other engagements.

Phil Coleman, who came over here as a constituent of the Big Four, now disbanded, proposes to work alone.

Allan Aynesworth, the well known dramatic actor, is to appear at the Hippodrome on Monday in a sketch called "My Friend Mr. White."

An action pending between Marie Lloyd and the Moss Empires, as to the actress' right to appear at the Pavilion, Glasgow, while holding a contract for the Moss houses, has been settled. Miss Lloyd has entered into further contracts with the Moss Empires by way of atonement.

Oswald Stoll appealed against a recent magisterial decision, imposing a fine of $250 in respect of stage plays at the Coliseum. Mr. Stoll's contention was that an alteration of the law dealing so unkindly with sketches being assured, he should not be penalized in the meantime. But the Superior Court held that while the law prohibiting sketches existed, it must be enforced.

McMahon and Chapelle are now playing "Why Hubby Missed the Train," on the Moss-Stoll tour, with much success. They are disposed to try a pantomime engagement.

Frank Bostock will install his jungle and arena at the City Exhibition Hall, Manchester, for the Christmas season.

Lily Lena, now in London for a holiday, says the American manager is "just beautiful." He takes a real human interest in the performer."

There was a meeting of sketch actors, authors and managers, on Sunday, presided over by George Gray, the "Fighting Parson." It was decided to form a protective association.

Cyril Clensy, the mimic, has a new and ingenious environment for his act, which he successfully tried at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday. An actor, cast on an island, is ordered to amuse its cannibal king, or die. He imitates a dozen popular favorites with remarkable skill, but there is never a smile on the dusky monarch's face. As a final, desperate effort the actor burlesques Tree's Hamlet. A shout of laughter ensues, and the mimic's life is saved.

Frank and Jen Latona were added to the Hippodrome programme in an emergency on Monday. Frank Latona is gradually retiring from the act in favor of his wife, whose humorous and sentimental songs and pianoforte solos are admirable.

Paul Spadoni sprained his hip, and has had to give up immediate engagements.

Minola Mada Hurst sends me eulogistic cuttings from the Copenhagen papers apropos to her mannikin act at the Circus Variety.

Hymack sails for America to-day, under contract for the Orpheum circuit.

OUR AUSTRALIAN LETTER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

SYDNEY, SEPT. 28.

At Her Majesty's, "The King of Cadonia" made still another triumphal entry into the favor of Sydney playgoers on Saturday evening, when there was a large audience. The performance was in every way quite in keeping with those that preceded it during the current season, and the individual efforts of Dorothy Court, Lottie Sargent and Herbert Clayton, the pleasantness of W. S. Percy and those associated with them, no less than the excellence of the music, evoked enthusiastic applause.

At the Theatre Royal J. C. Williamson's "Jack and Jill" pantomime company opened for another season here, despite its long run at Her Majesty's earlier in the year, and was royally welcomed, all the songs, jokes and ballets being cordially received. The principal change in the cast is that Rupert Darrell, son of George Darrell, takes the part of the Baron, and has ingeniously followed in the whimsical footsteps of his predecessor, Bert Gilbert, with conspicuously successful results. Morris and Wilson repeat their clever animal impersonations, and Walter Stanton is seen again in his realistic role as a giant rooster to whom a well trained gamecock gives battle. The only other change of any moment made in the cast is that Nance Maher, formerly Gleam, the fairy, now makes a pert and tuneful Jill to Stella Gastelle's Jack, and Marie Eaton has been translated to the role of the Fairy. Principals, chorus and the company generally all work together with clock-like precision.

On Saturday night, at the Criterion, the final performance of "Cinderella" pantomime was given, when the company was "farewelled" by a densely packed audience. At the conclusion of the final chorus, coils of colored ribbon were thrown from the boxes, circles and stalls, to the members of the company, with very pretty effect. Many and beautiful were the floral gifts to the principal ladies, and equally numerous and very quaint were the offerings to the male merrymakers.

In response to an imperative call, William Cromwell thanked the public in a characteristic speech, in which he said the company would soon return to Sydney and appear "until they were found out." Edwin Brett and Tom Payne also made short speeches. John Gunn (of Messrs. Meynell and Gunn) stated that the company would probably return in a new play in about ten weeks. Miss Meredo, when called upon to speak, simply thanked the public, and hoped "to return to dear old Sydney many, many times." Ruth Lincoln was also called for.

The "Cinderella" company leave immediately for Melbourne, and for a week the Criterion will be closed in preparation for the Oscar Ashe-Lily Brayton season, which commences Oct. 2.

On last Saturday night Bland Holt's Company took its leave of Sydney audiences in "One of the Best." This was afforded an enthusiastic farewell, and only goes to show how popular is this actor-manager and his company.

Saturday night George Marlow produced at the Palace, for the first time in Australia, Frank Melville's "Married to the Wrong Man," before a large audience. The play necessarily abounds in sensationalism, and after the first act develops into a production of more than average merit. Several of the scenes are strikingly picturesque, while many of the situations are sufficiently strong to hold the attention. In some respects the cast is a strong one. Nellie Ferguson's portrayal of Ruth is quite the best work of the production. The part allotted to her is one which might easily have been overdone, but she skillfully kept it within range of possibility. Kenith Hunter was the hero. He bore himself in a manly manner. Hilliard Vox, the "bold, bad man" of the production, performed up to the traditions, while J. P. O'Neill, as Jasper Skinner, was cast for a character which suited the versatile performer admirably. Nora Wynns, who made her first appearance in Sydney, as Rose O'Connor, played effectively. Ethel Buckley, as Dolly Friter, was delightfully vivacious, and introduced the little vein of comedy into the play. A. W. Tyrer, Albert Lucas (who was exceptionally well placed), Thos. Curran, Horace Nightingale, Leah Douglas and Pattie Gourlay were excellent.

At the Tivoli, Captain Winston's seals, headed by the redoubtable "Sam," remain. As acrobats, jugglers, musicians, and general humorists, they are a good deal more diverting than many of the twentieth century comedians. Winston's seals are well worth seeing. Among the new faces in Mr. Rickard's company were: Nellie Powers, Bob Lloyd, comedian: Baby Trivett, and Essie Jennings. The Sprightly Sisters will appear to-morrow night for the last time and the Prices and Rochfort and Hart are also booked for an early departure. Among others now contributing are: Athmore Grey, the Wheelers, Blake and Granby, Vaude and Verne.

At the Lyceum Hall, Spencer's Theatrescope Co. are starring the fine historical film depicting Washington under the British flag and Washington under the American flag, as well as other up-to-date first class subjects. Mr. Spencer also announces that he has secured the Australian rights of the cinematograph pictures of Shackleton's Antarctic expedition, and they will be shown in a few weeks at the Town Hall.

West's pictures have moved from the Palace to the Glaciarium, and show up-to-date pictures. At the Bijou and Queen's Hall, picture shows are given every night, and good business is the order of the day.

World of Players.

SAM T. REED writes: "I closed the Myrtle L. Pepin Stock Co. in Fort Collins, Colo., the middle of last June, and went into vaudeville for three months. I then joined the Burt Imson Co., directing and playing a line of general business. My wife, Myrtle L. Pepin, is spending the Winter months in California, and looking after our claim in Nevada (a Christmas present from her brother), which has developed into a very good claim. She was very much in need of a rest after closing in stock, as we had produced one hundred and six plays, Miss Pepin doing all the leads and myself the comedy. The Imson Show is packing them in up in this country. We have the most comfortable car that I have ever seen. Mr. Imson has an excellent line of booking to the coast and return, playing the best time in the great Northwest. We have a private smoking room in one of the staterooms, and you can always find THE OLD RELIABLE to help pass away a few pleasant hours each week. D. S. Reddeld has joined the company, playing leads, otherwise the company remains the same."

NOTES from the Knowlton & Darlington Theatrical Enterprises.—The Mynor-Darlington Stock Co., after playing eleven weeks in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, has gone on Pennsylvania and New Jersey time for thirty-eight weeks of solid booking. Mr. Darlington has placed S. Albert Tice at the head of the No. 1 company, featuring him in a repertory of high class plays, offering as special mention, "The Gulf Between," a strong drama in four acts. This drama will soon play a Boston engagement. We have surrounded Mr. Tice with an acting company of sixteen people, and carry a carload of special scenery and lighting effects. Mr. Tice is well known in Northeastern territory, having played the leads with the Taylor Stock Co. season of 1907-08. We are to open a Boston office next week. Roster: Knowlton & Darlington, proprietors; Elmer K. Knowlton, treasurer; S. Albert Tice, director of productions. We are billing like a circus, and have a pony turnout for street advertising.

NOTES FROM THE ALFRED PALMER REPERTORY CO.—This attraction opened at Monroe, N. Y., Oct. 27. The company is composed of the best people. Roster: Jennette Gould, leads; Florence Ablott, ingenues; Miss H. Le Roy, characters; Alfred Jones, leads; J. Richardson, heavies; Artie Bernard, characters; R. Whitman, light comedy; Geo. Fitch, carpenter; L. Sullivan, electrician. The company has played the Western territory, where it met with continual success. We put on all the latest repertory plays, and will play city time later in the season. Alfred Palmer is general manager. L. Sheldon, in advance.

Ingram, Harvey Gates, Harold Wilson, Artie May Blackburn, Bonnie Bonner, Molly Verner, Maxine Roseberry, Max Rosenberg, general manager; Harold Wilson, business manager; Poynter Walters, electrician; Lafe Coyne, stage carpenter; Harry Barton, properties; E. HARRY P. WINSMAN has taken the management of "The Lily and the Prince" Co., now touring Canada.

JACK MARVIN was specially engaged by Col. Fred Feigl for the part of Pasquale, the half breed, in Broadhurst & Currie's production of "Texas," which opened at Denver, Col., Aug. 29. He says "'Texas' enjoyed record business last year, but it is breaking its own record this season."

NOTES from the Whitney Collins Attractions.—While the Sherman Stock Co. was playing Greenfield, Ind., the company was entertained on the evening of Oct. 14, by Burns and Clarke, it being the first anniversary of their marriage. After the performance the entire company went to the Shields cafe where a six course dinner was served. Many toasts were offered to the host and hostess, and then the company retired to the parlors of the cafe where music and dancing were the order until a late hour. Burns and Clarke are in their tenth week with the company doing their feature specialty and playing parts, comedian and soubrette.

NOTES FROM THE BURLEIGH CASH CO.—We are once more back in Indiana, after having been on the road for seventy-one straight weeks. The business has been good. We are booked in Indiana until Jan. 1 next. The company carries fourteen people, and the roster is as follows: Burleigh Cash, manager; Edmund Moses, Billie Miller, Howard Race, Jack Cassin, Ed. Mills, Walter Pruitt, Fred Taggert, Blanche Tarver, Genevieve Rutherford, Dora Taggart, Mae Beresville, Mrs. M. Rutherford, and Hallie Tarver, pianist.

FERDINAND TIDMARSH, who appeared as Jimsie with one of the "Paid in Full" companies last season, is now being featured by the Wills Amusement Co. as Bud Larabee, in a dramatization of Anthony Wills' popular novel of Western life, "The Lost Trail." The company is under the personal management of George M. Thomas.

MAY KINDER, an American actress, was married at the Registry Office, London, Eng., on Oct. 26, to W. H. D. Astley, a non-professional.

NOTES FROM CRAWFORD'S "UNCLE ZEKE" Co.—We are in our sixth week, and business for the season looks very bright. We opened in Missouri, and have spent most of our time in Kansas. The company seems to be a little stronger than in previous seasons. Raymond D. Crawford now has charge of the advance work, and Talmage Crawford has charge of the company. Chas. Axley is again playing the title role, and Frank Hayden is in his fifth season as stage manager. Other members of the company are: Emil Crawford, Sterling Janes, Guy Long, Lane Shanklin, Jack Biser, David Stump, Earl Desmond, Will Holland, R. W. Crawford, Sid Jolley, Ethel Hayden, Dollie Dale, Baby Marie and Mabel Rubel. Our band and the orchestra are giving the best of satisfaction, and the Slide Quartette and Mr. Axley are the feature specialties.

RAYMOND SILLITO, trap drummer, closed with the Trahern Stock Co., on Long Island, Oct. 23, and will be located in Springfield, Mo., for the Winter season.

NOTES FROM "THE GIRL QUESTION" Co. (Eastern).—Alice May Sullivan is now playing the part of Elsie, the Cashier, and gives a performance that has far exceeded the most sanguine expectations. Besides a duet, leading three numbers, she also introduces impersonations, and is nightly awarded with recalls. The Coachmen's Quartette, composed of Walner, Gittner, Blear and Getts, now introduce their specialty in act two.

MOCK SAD ALLI NOTES.—"A Night in the Orient," Mock Sad Alli's new attraction, under the management of S. L. Kelly, opened in Chicago Oct. 8. The company is going South for the Winter. The Mock Sad Alli people are planning on placing two more "Orient" companies on the road before Christmas. Business has been excellent with all of their attractions so far, and a good season is looked forward to.

F. C. CARTER has made special arrangements wth the Shuberts to play "The Wolf," fair week, at El Paso, Tex. Edwin B. Bailey and Grace Lockwood will appear in the leading roles.

Vaudeville and Minstrel

NOTES FROM McCABE'S GEORGIA TROUBADOURS.—The weather through Iowa has been very variable, but our business has been far beyond our expectations. The company now numbers twelve good specialty people, and we will soon add four more acts, making sixteen in all. Wm. and Edna McCabe, in their unique specialty, are scoring big. Clever Billy Young, descriptive singer and refined entertainer, is doing admirably. We are featuring two special songs, written by Wm. McCabe and Billy Young, and Billy Young and Norman Thomas. Some of our people are ill, which handicaps us a trifle, but the audiences are convulsed with laughter by the funny antics of our comedians. We have new scenery and use all special printing matter. Booked up till February, 1910.

JAMES CHATHAM writes: "Having closed with the Avenue Girls Co., and also severing my connection as tenor and manager of the Peerless Quartet, I have entered vaudeville with my wife (Vayne Wallace)."

BERT GEYER is in his tenth week on the Central States tour, and is doing well. He was on the opening bill at the Casino in Erie, Oct. 23, which was formerly the Casino Rink. It has been remodeled, and has a seating capacity of 1,000. Mr. Geyer is booked solid until April, 1910.

LILLIAN HARDY and Robert Wingate have joined hands, and will be known as the Wingate Minstrels, introducing a singing, talking and trick bone playing act.

SADIE BRAND, of the Brand Sisters, has been removed from the Broad Street Hospital, Oneida, N. Y., where she has been suffering from typhoid fever and peritonitis. She is doing nicely at her home in Philadelphia, Pa.

DALE AND BOYLE report meeting with success over the Poli circuit. Sydney Dale is pronounced to be one of the best impersonators on the stage to-day. They are booked solid over the United time until June, 1910.

WHILE playing the Bijou, Kingston, N. Y., Mr. Larrivee, of Larrivee and Lee, "The Candy Kid and the Girl," had his palate cut by a specialist, and his voice is better now than ever.

EDWARD WALDMANN, the Shakespearean actor, now playing vaudeville, appearing with his company in condensed versions of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "The Devil," has a new vaudeville act in preparation, consisting of short scenes from four classic plays.

HARRY H. LAMOUNT is in his ninth week with Billie Burke's new act, playing the French artist. The act is featured on the Keith & Proctor circuit. Carroll Henry is the star.

HILDUR OSTMAN, who has been at her home on Staten Island for the Summer, opens her season at Dover, N. J., Oct. 30.

MRS. DAVE MURPHY will work in an act with Dan Lacy, the former partner of her late husband, next season, as Murphy and Lacy. Mrs. Murphy wishes to thank the Actors' Fund for their timely aid in her bereavement.

PETER M. THOMPSON, of Thompson and Serida, is at the home of his brother in Providence, R. I., suffering with a chronic throat trouble. He is being treated by an eminent throat specialist. His wife (L. A. Serida) is working alone.

VAN HOVEN, "the mad musician," is playing the Inter-State and Orpheum circuits.

GEO. W. RIPLEY'S OLD TIME MINSTRELS, which toured New York State under canvas the last Summer, closed their season at Greene, N. Y., and will re-open their 1910 Summer season at the same place in May. They will travel by rail, and the company will number twenty-five people. Mr. Ripley is now placing orders for new canvas and scenery, also special paper. He is spending a month at his home, Homer, N. Y. Several of last season's company have been re-engaged.

ETHEL WHITESIDE returned after a three months' tour in Europe, and resumed her American engagements Nov. 1.

VANNERSON, LEROY AND VERMETTE sailed Oct. 28 for Cuba, to open with the Pubillones Circus Nov. 1, in their seven horizontal bar act.

GRACE CUMMINGS AND COMPANY, in her comedy sketch, "A Mail Order Wife," has signed contracts for the Inter-State circuit, commencing Jan. 3, 1910.

BARNES AND WEST write us from London that their refined dancing act has met with much success in London, having played that city for five months steadily in the Gibbon's and Syndicate halls, including long runs at the Tivoli, Oxford and Pavilion. They have three years solid bookings abroad, including a tour of Australia and New Zealand, sailing Aug. 5, 1910, having been booked by Harry Rickards himself. They open at the Apollo, Berlin, in December, and remain on the continent for sixteen weeks, after which they return to England to fulfill engagements there.

MARVELOUS LIVELY, contortionist and equilibrist, is in his fifth season as the olio feature of Coburn's Greater Minstrels, playing the South.

I., on Monday, Nov. 2, with "Aida," in which Blanche Hamilton Fox will sing the part of Amneris. "Il Trovatore" and "Carmen" will be the other operas heard during the week. After one week in Providence the company will sing in other Eastern cities.

BOSTON OPERA SEASON.

Final announcement of the season's plans for Boston's first opera house has been made. The regular season is to open on Nov. 8, with a performance of "La Gioconda," which will make a draft on the forces of the Metropolitan Opera House, with which the local institution is allied.

Singers in both the new opera house and the Metropolitan, in New York, will be Lillian Nordica, Lydia Lipokouska, Alice Nielsen, Jane Noria, Antonio Pini-Corsi, Fernando Gianoli-Gallietti and Enzo Leliva.

The season has been divided into two parts, the first continuing from Nov. 8 to Jan. 1, and the second from Feb. 7 to March 26. There will be during the whole season sixty regular subscription performances to be given after the New York fashion on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and on Saturday afternoons. Then there will be Sunday evening concerts and popular priced opera on Saturday evenings.

A Glance at Acts New to the Metropolis.

BY HANK.

Wormwood's Animals.

Prof. Wormwood is unquestionably a past master in the training and handling of animals. His new animal act, which includes monkeys and a varied collection of dogs of different sizes and breeds, was shown at the Fifth Avenue last week, and made a hit seldom equaled by an offering of this kind. Usually animal acts do not make the appeal to audiences that will stand any severe tests, because so many of the tricks that trainers show have been done so often. Wormwood, however, makes his pets do new things or perform old tricks in a new and novel way, and the result is that there is no lagging to the act.

The animals were distributed about the stage, with one large monkey (or ape) stationed near the wings, close to the apron. This animal was dressed as a man, with rouged cheeks, which gave his funny black face an odd appearance. He has a temper, apparently, for every few moments he would plunge against the wing, and once on Monday he sent a stage hand who happened to be standing against the wing sprawling backward when he made a plunge.

Many tricks by dogs and monks were introduced, among the earliest being a balance by a Mexican hairless dog performed on a rope held by a great Dane and Wormwood. A monkey dressed as a woman, with rouged cheeks, then rode a dog, and undressed and somersaulted on the back of the running animal. Wormwood then showed a little canine, apparently a spaniel, which would take a perfectly rigid position, such as a hypnotic subject assumes, and while thus "fixed" was hung up on a hat rack.

One of the cleverest as well as most amusing tricks shown was a mimic fight between two monks, one of which was the unruly ape. Wormwood made both animals sit on chairs and pick away at string instruments. Then he told the ape that the other monk had made slurring remarks at the ape's playing, at which the ape immediately took off his coat and piled into the monk. This "scrap" settled, Wormwood told the monk the same story, and the monk immediately took of his coat and waded into the ape.

All the monks were finally mounted on wheels, and they circled about the stage in fine style, finally winding in and out of about a dozen chairs that were placed about at random. Wormwood has a "corker" of an animal act, and should have no trouble in booking it for a long time to come. It ran about nineteen minutes, on the full stage.

The Neapolitans.

Another act under direction of Charles Lovenberg, who has made a reputation for his good judgment in the selection of what is most desirable in vaudeville, was shown at the Colonial last week, in the Neapolitans, a singing three, who gave upper West Siders some of the best vocal work heard in the two-a-day for a long time.

Pretty costumes and a special drop, which apparently depicted an outdoor scene in Naples, were provided, but the real value of the act is in its vocal department, and this would carry it without drop or special costumes.

Rosalind Lowe, soprano; Marion Littlefield, contralto, and Francisco Manetta, tenor, are the Neapolitans in this case, and their selections included Barcarrole, from "Tales of Hoffman;" a potpourri of Neapolitan folk songs; the Miserere, from "Il Trovatore;" "The Neapolitan Serenade," a selection from "Lucia," and "Annie Laurie," which was used as an encore number. Miss Lowe is a soprano whose voice is very sweet and pretty, and Miss Littlefield's contralto is also delightful. Excellent as the work of the women was, however, the tenor seemed to overshadow them in popularity, for there was special applause given him. The act proved a most praiseworthy one in every respect, running about twenty minutes, in two.

Yarick and Lalonda.

A team of female impersonators, Yarick and Lalonda, who have been playing in and around New York for some time, were on the bill at Gane's Circle Theatre last week, in a singing and dancing act that had much to commend it. Both appear in the wigs and dresses of girls, and as they have an extensive wardrobe the dressing of the act naturally becomes quite a feature.

They opened wearing long soubrette gowns of ankle length, fluffy and elaborate in make, and their song, "Peach Basket Girlie," was well rendered. A solo by one of the team followed, the song being about a Gibson man, and the accompanying dance proving nimble. "Ain't It Awful," a comic number, rendered by the other member of the duo, was well done, and a Chinese song and dance, in which one appeared as the man and the other as the woman, in pajamas, proved the best introduction of all. The throwing of pictures on a screen back of them while they did this Chinese affair did not help the song any—in fact, it rather detracted from it.

A song and dance at the finish, in which the one member of the team did some excellent footwork, ended the offering very nicely. As they bowed their way out they removed their wigs. The specialty is neatly arranged, and makes quite a pleasing number, especially for the moving picture houses. The act ran about eleven minutes, on the full stage.

Bonner-Meredith Company.

The Bonner-Meredith Company played a little sketch at the Columbia, Brooklyn, last week, which they called "On An Arizona Ranch," in which a story of love and hate, and a comedy scene or two, was quite entertainingly told.

The programme gave no character or names of players, but there are four people in the company, not counting a man who played a big black bear. The scene of action is an Arizona ranch where lives a girl who is wooed by a typical plainsman, who is so extremely bashful that he cannot pluck up courage enough to propose. A "Greaser" is also in love with the girl, but the plainsman saves her from him and wounds the Mexican in a fight. At length the plainsman is brought to the proposal point and slays the bear at the finish of the act.

The ending of the sketch is weak and should be changed, as the killing of a bear which is plainly a "fake" animal, is not convincing by any means. There is much good material in the act, however, and the little scenes between the girl and her plainsman lover are nicely developed and well played. A negro servant also figured in the story, and all the roles were well played. The act ran about twenty-one minutes, on the full stage.

Jack Hawkins.

The opening act on the bill at the American last week was Jack Hawkins, "in feats of grace and agility." Hawkins does some spectacular high jumps with weights, beginning his act by leaping (without weights) over half a dozen chairs that are placed in a circle. He then made the same jumps over the chairs with one foot.

His high kicks were remarkable, particularly his double kicks, with both feet leaving the ground at the same time. Hawkins then showed a standing jump from a table over a bar and eight chairs placed against each other. This was done with the aid of weights.

Placing his feet in a small basket he jumped over chairs, then onto the table, and from that over the bar to the ground, and finished his act with a couple of jumps (with weights) over a bar which was fixed at sixty-six inches from the ground. His act aroused the audience to hearty applause. He was on view about eight minutes, on the full stage.

Farley and Clare.

Farley and Clare are two dancing youths who appeared in second position on the Hammerstein bill last week, being billed as "singers and dancers." Their vocal work, however, was confined to a brief moment or two of salutation, "How Do You Do, Miss Josephine?" being the salutation in question.

They danced on the mat during the rest of their act, and they danced cleverly enough to get the blase Hammerstein patrons enthusiastic, which means that they did exceedingly well. The boys made no change of costume, but their suits looked neat and they made a nice appearance. They occupied the stage about nine minutes, in one.

Mack and Williams.

Mack and Williams put on a singing and dancing act at the Columbia, Brooklyn, last week, that in its dancing department, at least, was away from the traveled track to some extent. Both members of this team are small in stature, the girl in particular being a doll-like creature, who looks very cute and pretty.

The man is the dancer, and he holds close attention with a dancing illustration of the various walks he has observed, showing the Bowery character, the "Kangaroo" walk and others that are amusingly reproduced. A ball game in dancing pantomime, depicting the antics of the catcher, a self-important pitcher, and the star batter also proved to be most entertaining. The girl's singing help to carry the act to success, and there was much approval shown the specialty.

BLANCHE RING WINS.

She May Sing "I've Got Rings on My Fingers."

Judge Holland, in the United States Circuit Court in Philadelphia, on Oct. 29 dismissed the motion for a preliminary injunction sought by the New York Broadway Producing Co., to restrain Blanche Ring from singing the popular ditty, "I've Got Rings on My Fingers."

At the opening of court Miss Ring's attorney attacked the bill in equity asking that the singer be enjoined from singing the song in question. He declared that it was falsely stated in the bill that the copyright of the song in dispute was owned by the New York Producing Co. The real owners, he declared, were Francis, Day & Hunter, of New York.

MARIE TEMPEST'S AMERICAN TOUR.

Charles Frohman has decided upon the early part of December as the date for the commencement of Marie Tempest's brief American tour in "Penelope." Miss Tempest will be accompanied to America by the production and cast of players that supported her during her long engagement at the Comedy Theatre, London.

WANDA LUDLOW'S OLD HOME.

Cincinnati proudly claims Wanda Ludlow, the soubrette of "The Candy Kid," as one of her own sprightly daughters. She received a warm welcome from old friends during the sojourn of that musical melodrama in that city.

SINGER SHOOTS HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. A. W. Talbott, a singer who has appeared in opera abroad, and who sang in America in concert, shot her husband through the right lung in the office of Judge W. D. Jones, Reno, Nev., on Oct. 28.

At last advices it was stated that the wounded man would probably die, but he said that the shooting was accidental.

The couple had some trouble, and Mrs. Talbott visited the office of her attorney, Judge Jones. Later Jones talked to her husband. Talbott desired that his wife be present, and she was sent for. She came, and it is said that before Judge Jones could interfere Mrs. Talbott fired, hit her husband, and sent a second bullet into the floor.

KILLED BY FALL AT HIPPODROME.

Albert Cole, twenty-three years of age, an electrician, of 34 Sharpe Avenue, Port Richmond, S. I., was mortally injured, afternoon of Thursday, Oct. 28, on the stage of the New York Hippodrome. The curtain was down at the time he fell. Cole went to the top of a 70ft. ladder at the back of the stage to arrange the lights for the setting of "The Middle of the Earth." He lost his balance and fell. In his descent he struck an iron projection and then landed upon the head of one of the Maori chiefs. The latter was knocked unconscious.

Cole was taken to the Flower Hospital, where he died. He sustained a broken back and internal injuries.

SUICIDE SHORT NOT THE ACTOR, WILLIAM SHORT.

In our last issue we published an account of the attempted murder of Evelyn Howard, a chorus girl, by her husband, William H. Short, who committed suicide after wounding his wife. We learn that Short's real name was John H. Short, and that he assumed the name of William.

We make this statement because William Short, actor of leads and heavies, writes us that he does not wish any of his friends to fall into the error of confusing him with the unfortunate deceased.

FREE SETTERS ENTERTAIN.

Arthur Dunn and Stuart Barnes, during their recent Cincinnati visit, were guests of the Free Setters Union, at Recklinghousen Rest.

CORT'S THEATRE, CHICAGO, OPENS.

The Cort Theatre, Dearborn Street, near Randolph, the newest of Chicago theatres, and seating 1,200 people, threw open its doors evening of Oct. 25, with the first local presentation of "The Kissing Girl," a three act musical comedy, by Harry Von Tilzer, Vincent Bryan and Stanislaus Stange, with Amelia Stone featured. The house has been built by John Cort, the Pacific coast manager, at a cost of $200,000, and marks his entree to the Middle West in a manner which leaves no room to doubt his eye for the artistic and the comfortable. The company is also his, and it is the intention of the management to have a company permanently, on the order of the Singer companies at the La Salle and Princess, and the Whitney company at the Whitney Opera House, thus giving us four musical comedy stock companies.

The offering itself has been gorgeously staged and costumed, and the company in the main is worthy the house it is playing in. The music has made a hit from the start, and will soon be whistled and sung all over town. It is the opinion in Chicago that the libretto is not by any means on a par with the music, nor has Mr. Bryan equaled Mr. Von Tilzer's work with his lyrics, although in several instances they are very pleasing. The success of the musical comedy, and there is no doubt of its staying powers, is attributable to the music, the company and the manner in which Mr. Cort has staged it.

The bulk of the performance falls upon the broad shoulders of J. C. Miron as Hippocrates Muller; John Park as Fritz Kobus, Amelia Stone as Lina, and Armand Kalisz as Karl Oppe, who all acquit themselves well, with Blanche Morrison as Christina, and Martha George as Margaret Kobus, pressing them for honors. The cast: Tina, Marie Vernon; Mina, Ethel Bell; Margaret Kobus, Martha George; Karl Oppe, Armand Kalisz; Christina, Blanche Morrison; Albert Wenzel, George Barrington; Victor Schnitzel, William R. Arnold; Paul Pretzel, Charles F. Orr; Wilhelm Katzel, H. S. Barnett; Hippocrates Muller, Joseph Miron; Lina, Amelia Stone; Fritz Kobus, John Park; Max Pulaski, Mart Lorenz.

The house is at once one of the very prettiest and coziest in Chicago, and a credit to the owner and architect, J. E. O. Pridmore, who is responsible for some of the handsomest houses in town. On entering the house one is given the impression that he is entering an open air place of amusement, for the ceiling shows an exquisitely painted sky and the stars, while the meeting place of the ceiling and walls is tastefully hidden by a trellis with vines which jut out over the audience. The interior has been designed after the style of the beautiful Greek Theatre at Taormina, Sicily, which Mr. Pridmore visited just before the fatal earthquake of a year ago. In the sky-ceiling are seen twinkling stars, with clouds moving across, this effect being produced by electrical machinery. To further carry out the effect of this Greco-Roman place of amusement, the fire curtain has been painted to represent a scene on the Island of Sicily, and so artistic is the effect that it moved Burton Holmes, in his Sicily travelogue this week at Orchestra Hall, to call attention to it. Peyraud, the French artist, painted the curtain, the painting being reproduced from photographs secured and sketches made by Mr. Pridmore on his travels. The effect is even carried into the boxes on either side, which rise high above the orchestra seats.

The proscenium arch is a wonder in itself, giving the effect of looking out through an enormous window onto this Italian landscape, the arch being finished in a dull gold, with twining leaf effect. "The Spirit of Drama, Music and Song" is done in sculpture at the crown of the arch.

Of the auditorium nothing but praise can be offered, although it has the appearance of being very small, there being but fourteen rows of seats from the orchestra pit to the back wall, but the width of the house makes up for this deficiency, while at the same time one can hear and see perfectly from every seat in the house. The seats themselves are roomy and most comfortable, and the aisles are of full width with plenty of room between the seat rows. There is not a pillar in the house to obstruct the view, and the entire effect is that of good cheer and solid comfort. The lobby is almost too small, but this was necessitated on account of the lack of depth in the plot on which the house was built, but the crowds which have attended ever since the opening have been handled very nicely.

There are smoking loges on the mezzanine floor, where smoking is permitted during the performance on the order of foreign concert halls; handsomely equipped retiring rooms and smoking rooms in the basement, and from the boxes a full view of the stage can be obtained.

Back of the curtain line every possible convenience and comfort for the handling of scenery and properties and for the members of the company have been installed, and the electric lighting system, both for the stage and the front of the house, is adequate to the most exacting demands from the stage director. The ventilating system is complete in every detail.

The house from the street is one of the neatest appearing in the city, the lines being plain, the dull brick of the structure being relieved by plain fluted columns of white, while the entrance is finished in a copper bronze effect which is pleasing to the eye. A large metal and glass canopy stretches from the building line to the outer line of the sidewalk, above which is a mammoth electric sign reaching nearly to the top of the building, with the word "Cort" in large letters, and the name of the attraction beneath it, while around the whole is a scroll work of electric lights, which work in a worm-like effect at night.

MORE REGARDING CHICAGO THEATRE LEASES.

The Morrison estate in Chicago last week leased for ninety-nine years, the block of land on Clark Street, between Washington and Madison Streets, on the East side of the street, and just South of the alleyway, to the Chicago Gaiety Theatre Co., the lot of land being 100x120 feet, on which a theatre and hotel will be built, with the expectation of having it ready to open next season. The rental terms are considered to be among the highest ever acquired for property in this locality, being $40,000 per year for ninety-seven years of the term, which is at the rate of four per cent. on $100,000, or $10,000 per front foot, and $83.33 per square foot. The property has been valued at $677,220. J. E. O. Pridmore will be the architect.

Announcement of the positive closing of the Cohan & Harris deal for a theatre on Madison Street, opposite the new La Salle Hotel, is expected within a few days, on which it is said the firm expects to spend $1,000,000.

Mort H. Singer, manager of the Singer Brothers' enterprises in Chicago and on the road, for many years manager of the La Salle Theatre, and also manager of the Princess Theatre, South Clark Street, near Jackson Boulevard, announces that he expects to erect a new theatre for musical comedy on Madison Street, near the La Salle Theatre, which is likely to pass out of his hands in a very short time. About $100,000 will be expended on it, and he will thus retain control of two musical comedy houses in Chicago. The Princess Amusement Co. is the name of the firm which Mr. Singer represents.

OPENING OF THE NEW BRONX THEATRE.

Monday, Nov. 1, was a red letter day in the rapidly growing borough of the Bronx. On that date the Orpheum Theatre Co., of which Percy G. Williams is president and manager, threw open the doors of the new Thespian temple, situated at Melrose Avenue and One Hundred and Fiftieth Street, the heart of the most rapidly increasing community in Greater New York, and the most important point North of Times Square.

The building, which is modeled after the Paris Opera House, is in a style of architecture technically termed Neo Grec Renaissance, dating back to the period 490 B. C.

The building stands at the Southwest corner of Melrose Avenue and One Hundred and Fiftieth Street, with the main entrance on Melrose Avenue. The theatre has a frontage of 85 feet on Melrose Avenue, with a depth of 103 feet on One Hundred and Fiftieth Street. The lobby is spacious, being 25 feet in width, while the balance of the building is occupied by two large business stores. The second floor is devoted to an assembly room, while the third floor is devoted to offices.

The lobby is beautifully finished with marble walls, elaborately tiled floors, panelled ceiling, frescoed in coloratura colorings representing figures of literature, music, poetry and art. The foyer is exceedingly roomy, and measures 20 feet.

Among the many improvements in the auditorium, the one that strikes the auditor most pleasingly is the utter absence of posts. Complete view of the stage can be had from any seat in the house. The aisles, too, are very much broader and more commodious than are usually found even in the largest opera house, while the seating arrangements are as perfect as human ingenuity can make them. The distance, back to back, will prove a welcome innovation to the theatregoers.

The orchestra contains twenty-four rows, giving a total of seven hundred seats. There are ten proscenium boxes, two large ones on the first floor and eight smaller ones on the balcony and gallery tiers. Each floor contains handsome parlors and retiring rooms for the comfort and use of the lady patrons of the Bronx Theatre, while the wants of mere man are looked after by a large and commodious smoking and lounging room, situated in the basement.

Distinctive of all the Percy G. Williams' theatres, and partaking very much in the nature of a trade mark, are the balcony boxes around the front of the balcony, each comfortably seating eight persons. There are eleven of these boxes, and in addition there are eleven rows of comfortable seats in the balcony, each one giving a perfect view of the stage. An innovation is also made in the gallery. Instead of the usual unsightly benches, there are thirteen rows of chairs fully as comfortable as those in the orchestra.

In point of safety this theatre outrivals any on the American continent, there being no less than twenty-one separate exits leading to Melrose Avenue, One Hundred and Fiftieth Street, or to the wide court on the south side of the building. The ample provision for safety is made in the four tiers of dressing rooms, thus providing safety for the performers as well as the audience. The building is as nearly "strictly fireproof" as a theatre can be made. The construction consists solely of steel and stone, concrete and brick. In addition to this, an elaborate system of fire protection has been provided, consisting of a complete auxiliary fire protection plant supplied by two separate means working independently of each other. This provides for an independent source for water supply in addition to a suction tank worked by an electric pump located in the basement. The most complete sprinkling service is operated in addition to this. The latest design of automatic skylight over the stage and the most perfect system of ventilation known. A heavy smoke and flame proof steel curtain worked by hydraulics, forming virtually a solid wall between the auditorium and the stage, standpipes on either side of the auditorium and stage supplied with standard hose and connections, make this theatre as near fireproof as human ingenuity can plan. The stage, which is thirty-two feet in depth, with a large apron, will allow plenty of space for the biggest and most pretentious acts in vaudeville. The seating capacity is nearly 1,800, divided about as follows: Orchestra, 700; balcony, 442; gallery, 491; boxes, 11. The interior decorations of the new Bronx Theatre may be termed a special type. Technically they are called French Renaissance, but more aptly put it is French Renaissance modernly improved and brought up to date. The predominating color is a warm rich crimson red largely interspersed with gold. The side walls are of silk and all of this unique shade of crimson framed in gold. The decorative paintings all produced from original freehand drawings, are numerous and varied, being a compromise between ancient mythological and modern art. All are made with the idea of representing literature, art, poetry and music. There are a myriad of these figures in the various paintings throughout the house, not taken from any country, clime or nationality, each and every one having a distinct individuality. The principal painting, located over the sounding board, is a study in modern theatre decoration. Keeping in mind the general idea of art, literature, poetry and music, countless figures are used, each and every one having individuality, but as art knows no country, so the artist has taken the poetic license in making this production, and while he has not favored any country, creed or nationality, he has drawn from each the best features, combining and blending the ancient and modern so deftly that after leaving the myriad of figures surrounded by wreaths containing Cupids, all distinctive in themselves, it drifts gradually away into a beautiful landscape of more modern days, always preserving the harmony, giving the auditor the effect of a gradual awakening from a dream of the past into a bright and beautiful landscape with its rustic simplicity and restfulness. Everything produced is from original drawings and shows the perfection of detail. The tout ensemble will give a warm, pleasing effect exceedingly restful to the eye; no theatre in New York is more handsomely decorated, and in no theatre in the country has there been keener ingenuity displayed.

In presenting this theatre to the patrons of the Bronx, the Orpheum Co., consisting of Percy G. Williams, president and manager; Sam Whitehouse, secretary; William Esterre, treasurer, and Messrs. Joseph, Max and Charles Huber, directors, think they have performed their greatest feat in theatre building. In building the new Bronx Opera House they have left nothing undone that could in any way cater to the comfort of their patrons. Before the work was started on July 9 last, America and the continent were searched for the latest improvements in modern theatre building. Everything new was incorporated with considerable original material furnished by the architects.

PANTAGES LEASES MAJESTIC, KANSAS CITY.

Alexander Pantages secured a ten year lease on the Majestic Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., last week. The Majestic attractions will move over to their new theatre, the Gayety, which is rapidly nearing completion.

Mr. Pantages will run the Majestic on the same lines as his other vaudeville houses, giving three performances a day. W. J. Casey will be the local manager.

A HAMMERSTEIN HOUSE FOR CHICAGO.

It is positively stated that before the close of 1910 Chicago will have an opera house of its own, thanks to the energy, foresight and business acumen of New York's great impresario, Oscar Hammerstein. Mr. Hammerstein has heretofore been known to Chicagoans chiefly from the jokes which have been sprung for a decade or more about the Hammerstein hat, but Chicagoans realize now that Mr. Hammerstein has something "under his hat."

A vacant lot at the corner of North Clark and Chestnut streets, Chicago, on the Northwest corner, and but one block North of the Bush Temple Theatre, is the location which will be honored by this great project. It is stated that upwards of $2,000,000 will be expended to give the city one of the very handsomest edifices of which it can boast, the lines of which, it is said, will closely follow those of the Hammerstein house in Philadelphia.

The lot fronts 300 feet on Clark Street, and has a depth of 165 feet on Chestnut Street. It is Mr. Hammerstein's idea to have the stage of the new house larger even than the Quaker City house, and which will give him an opportunity to carry out some ideas which even the Philadelphia stage is too small to accommodate.

When in Chicago last July Mr. Hammerstein closed the deal for the property with Ogden, Sheldon & Co., who represent the property owners, approximately $250,000 being paid for the property. It is stated that the plans for the building have all been drawn, and that Mr. Hammerstein has even placed contracts for much of the material. The Walton Flats, which adjoin the theatre property, are said to have also come under the Hammerstein banner, but for what purpose is not disclosed.

The building in its entirety will be devoted to the operatic art, there being no stores and no offices other than those of the management, and the impresario states positively that grand opera alone will have habitation there, which would indicate that Chicago will vie with New York in the number of presentations yearly, in marked contrast to the two, three and four weeks' seasons of past years. It is conceded that the acquirement of this property will vastly enhance real estate values around Clark Street and Chicago Avenue, which is one block South. This section has notably been one of the finest residence sections of the city since long "before the fire," and the location is easily accessible, as all Clark, Evanston Avenue, Devon Avenue and Lincoln Avenue cars pass the doors and transfer to all other routes on the North and West Sides, while the Northwestern Elevated Road, with its four track and express system, is but three minutes' walk from it, and through route cars from the South Side pass the doors. Max Rabinoff and Ben H. Atwell, who are engineering the Sunday afternoon concerts at the Auditorium, and which started their season 31, are Mr. Hammerstein's Chicago representatives, with Max Pam as his local attorney.

A NORTH POLE SONG.

The talk of the profession is the unprecedented hit scored by the new patriotic march song, "The Stars and Stripes are Nailed to the Old North Pole," published by the Pemberton Publishing House, Daly's Theatre Building, New York. It is only out a month, and is being sung from 'Frisco to Maine. Leonard Chick writes from Washington, D. C.: "Your song has been a tremendous hit with me. Am singing it at the Auditorium Theatre; it is going great. Got ten encores Sunday, and if my voice hadn't given out I'd be singing it yet."

Daisy C. Read and company write from Philadelphia, Pa.: "We made the greatest hit we ever had with your song. We could not get a better song for our act," etc., etc.

A sparkling song being put out by the same publishers, entitled "Chasing the Eagle," is a sure-fire winner, and will be heard from soon and often.

PARTNERSHIP TO PRODUCE PLAYS.

O. R. Henkel, business manager of Martin & Emery's "The Red Mill" Co., announced last week that Martin & Emery and Cohan & Harris had formed a partnership (papers of incorporation having just been received) to produce plays.

The first of the series is entitled "A Husband, a Wife and a Friend."

This was written by Harry Sheldon, in collaboration with Geo. M. Cohan. The premiere will take place at the Gaiety Theatre, New York City, some time in January. They are now negotiating with three noted stars for the principal parts.

"THE JOLLY BACHELORS" PRODUCED.

"The Jolly Bachelors," a Lew Field production, was given its initial presentation at the Hyperion Theatre, New Haven, Conn., on Thursday evening, Oct. 28. The words are by Glen MacDonough and the music by Raymond Hubbell. The first scene represents the Yale campus and the old brick row.

The story tells of four bachelors who wager $10,000 each to speak the truth for a month, and all go to New York City in order to keep their wager more effectively.

In the company are: Al. Leach, Robert Dailey, John T. Kelley, Joe Welch, Joe McShane, Emma Carus, Stella Mayhew, Effie Fay, Josie Sadler and Gertrude Vanderbilt.

COMPLETING NEW PLAY FOR BILLIE BURKE.

Robert de Flors and Armand Caillavet, the authors of "Inconstant George" and of "Love Watches," have notified Charles Frohman that in less than three months they expect to have completed the French play in which Billie Burke will appear in Paris, acting the part of an American girl attempting to speak French. The play, if successful in Paris, will later be done in English in America, with Miss Burke then playing the role of a French girl speaking broken English.

TWO FROHMAN PRODUCTIONS IN REHEARSAL.

Charles Frohman begins rehearsals this week of Conan Doyle's "The Fires of Fate," with a special cast. The play will receive its first American performance early in December, outside of New York. Monday of this week was also the date selected by Mr. Frohman for commencing rehearsals of F. Anstey's farce comedy, "The Brass Bottle," that has made so great a success at the Vaudeville Theatre, London.

THOMAS E. SHEA SIGNS WITH A. H. WOODS.

Thomas E. Shea has signed to star under the management of Al. H. Woods, and will open under the melodramatic producer's direction New Year's week.

Under Mr. Woods' direction Shea will appear in "The Counsel for the Defense," "The Bells" and other plays.

"THE HARVEST MOON" TO BE PRODUCED IN ENGLAND.

Augustus Thomas has sold to Charles Frohman the right to produce his latest play, "The Harvest Moon," in England. It will be presented there by an entirely English company.

OUR CHICAGO LETTER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

Western Bureau of the New York Clipper, 505 Ashland Block, Randolph and Clark Streets.

OCT. 30, 1909.

New houses are promised on Clark, near Madison Street; Madison, near La Salle Street, and the new Hammerstein Opera House, on North Clark, at Chestnut Street, within a twelve month. Now comes the announcement of the re-opening of the long closed La Salle Theatre with Mort Singer's newest musical comedy offering, "The Flirting Princess," Nov. 1. For week of Oct. 31 we have the local premiere of "They Loved a Lassie," at the Whitney, with Evans and Hopper featured; "Ben-Hur," at the Auditorium; Ward and Vokes, at the Globe, with the usual changes at the other houses which make a practice of not holding attractions over one week. In addition to this the Sunday afternoon orchestral concerts, with operatic and oratorio stars, will be inaugurated at the Auditorium to-morrow by the Rabinoff-Atwell Co. of local impresarios, a worthy project to give patrons of the middle class an opportunity to hear good music with fine singers and instrumentalists at a moderate price. Burton Holmes is also in our midst turning people away three times weekly at Orchestra Hall with his interesting and finely illustrated travelogues in the old world.

ILLINOIS (W. J. Davis, mgr.)—Robert Hilliard continues to interest all comers with interesting performances of "A Fool There Was." In which a fine company gives him splendid support. He will remain another fortnight.

POWERS' (H. J. Powers, mgr.)—This house was closed after the matinee 27, owing to the death of Mrs. James K. Hackett, the aged mother of Mr. Hackett, who is featured in "Samson," at this house. On his return, 29, the house re-opened, and he will continue another week. The local press was inclined to disfavor his performance of the title role, but praised the play. Robert Edeson, in "The Noble Spaniard," Nov. 8.

GARRICK (H. C. Duce, mgr.)—Maxine Elliott returned to us after an absence of two seasons, in Marion Fairfax's unique comedy, "The Chaperon," in which the star scored a great personal success. The reviewers are inclined to praise the play and also the company, stating that Mary Keogh made a great hit as Betty Coombs, and Julian L'Estrange was excellent as Jim Ogden, while the others were in the main very clever. The play is exquisitely staged, and the attendance has been large. At the matinees Miss Elliott submits "Sayonara," a little Japanese tragedy, with the longer play, and does splendid work in it. Miss Elliott sprained her ankle very badly during the final act of "The Chaperon," evening of 28, and was obliged to be carried to her dressing room. Two physicians were called and an attempt made to ease the pain, which was found to be too severe to allow her to continue the performance, and the audience was notified to this effect and dismissed, money being refunded at the box office. She was taken immediately to her room at the Congress Hotel, where the physician worked over her foot for some time in order to have her in readiness, if possible, to continue her work 29. Blanche Ring, in "The Yankee Girl," supported by Lee Kohlmar, another local favorite, Nov. 7.

COLONIAL (G. W. Lederer, mgr.)—"The Follies of 1909" has drawn to capacity right along, in spite of the absence for a few days of Eva Tanguay, who has been in New York. She is expected in Chicago Sunday, and next week will doubtless find her again in the cast. "The World Keeps Rolling On," a song by Phil Schwartz, has been added to the song successes of potpourri. The Engineers' Club of Logansport, Ind., will attend the performance in a body to-night. Will Philbrick is a newcomer in the company who has made an individual hit. The engagement is indefinite, and it would not be surprising to see it here about holiday time.

STUDEBAKER (E. J. Sullivan, mgr.)—Montgomery and Stone are stared in the face by the announcement of the final weeks here of "The Old Town," in spite of capacity houses and marked improvement in the action of the piece. Fred Stone is funnier than ever, and has gone back to the days of his childhood in introducing some of his old circus stunts, which are the marvel of the audiences. If he doesn't break his neck in the mean time, New York will see them soon. Two new songs by Alfred G. Robyn have been successfully introduced.

AUDITORIUM (M. Adams, mgr.)—Cohan & Harris' Minstrels and their successful engagement to-night give way to a splendid scenic revival of "Ben-Hur," opening 31, the cast including: Richard Buhler, Eleanor Moretti, Frank Weston, Mitchell Harris, Walter M. Sherwin, Anthony Andree, Alice Haynes and Loyola O'Connor. The engagement is for four weeks.

CHICAGO (G. A. Kingsbury, mgr.)—"Madame X" continues to capacity right along, with no signs of a let-up. It is the one best financial bet of the local season, and seems good for months to come.

WHITNEY (F. O. Peers, mgr.)—This is good-bye day for "The Climax," which has run steadily in this city for three months, at as many different theatres, and could stay on indefinitely could the time be secured. Charles E. Evans and Charles Hopper reinstate musical comedy, 31, in this house, with R. C. Whitney's production of "They Loved a Lassie," the musical version of George Ade's farce, "There and Back," in which the two stars have played the dramatic houses. The engagement is indefinite. Alice Yorke returns with them to the scene of former triumphs.

MCVICKER'S (G. C. Warren, mgr.)—That "The Thief," with Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon in the leading roles, is excellent fare in this house is proven by a continuity of capacity houses since the opening Sunday, and the fact that a deathlike stillness pervades the immense auditorium through the action. Blanche Walsh, in "The Test," Nov. 7.

GRAND (H. Askin, mgr.)—Success has at last come to the Grand again, in the combination of Eleanor Robson, in "The Dawn of a To-morrow," which opened Monday night to capacity, and has been thriving since. Miss Robson is at her best in her new role, and the company is given great praise. The engagement is indefinite.

GREAT NORTHERN (F. C. Eberts, mgr.)—Ezra Kendall has many followers in this city, and they have been thronging the house to see him in "The Vinegar Buyer." Marguerite Clark will be the first to raise the prices at this house, when she arrives in "The Wishing Ring," Nov. 7, when the first of the Shubert attractions will be seen at this house.

OLYMPIC (S. Lederer, mgr.)—"The Girl from Rector's" has another week to stay, and business continues good. Jeffreys Lewis will supplant Kate Rolla 1, as Mrs. Witherspoon Copley. Edmund Breese, in "The Earth," Nov. 8, supported by Dorothy Dorr.

GLOBE (J. H. Brown, mgr.)—"Under Southern Skies" has prospered nicely this week. Ward and Vokes make their first appearance here 31, as joint stars since they separated a couple of seasons ago. "Checkers" Nov. 7.

CROWN (Carruthers & Rickson, mgrs.)—"In Panama" has done good business this week, and caused many hearty laughs. "In the Bishop's Carriage" 31, "The Honeymooners" Nov. 7.

NATIONAL (E. Clifford, mgr.)—George Sidney, in "The Joy Rider," has done capacity this week, and made a great hit. "The Honeymooners" 31.

PRINCESS (Wm. Singer, mgr.)—"The Goddess of Liberty," with Sallie Fisher and Geo. Parsons, continues to please with the neatness and prettiness of the score and story and cleverness of the cast.

CORT (U. J. Herrmann, mgr.)—This newest and exquisitely pretty house threw open its doors 25, to capacity, with "The Kissing Girl," in which J. C. Miron, John Parks and Harry Von Tilzer, the composer, scored the biggest hits. The run is expected to last all season.

LA SALLE (Harry Singer, mgr.)—This house, which closed last May with the final performance of "The Golden Girl," has been kept dark ever since through court proceedings, but Mort Singer announces that he will turn on the lights Nov. 1, with the first local performances of "The Flirting Princess," another musical comedy by the seemingly inexhaustible trio, Adams, Hough and Howard. George Parsons has been staging the dramatic end, and Joseph C. Smith has been looking after the musical section, with Joe Howard putting in a word here and there. Violet Dale, John Ransone, May Vokes, Knox Wilson, Billy Robinson and other Chicago favorites are in the cast.

COLLEGE (C. B. Marvin, mgr.)—Patronage at this most beautiful of all stock theatres continues up to the high water mark, with excellent presentations of the best bills obtainable. This week, "Hello, Bill," an uproarious farce, is being capitally played. "The Last Round-Up," Nov. 1, will bring Helene Hadley into the company as leading woman, Marie Nelson being transferred to the People's temporarily, where Henry W. Rowell, the capable and handsome heavy man has also gone to play leading roles pro tem., both starting in "Hello, Bill." "The College Widow" Nov. 7, with Blanche Crozier as Flora Wiggins.

BIJOU (C. P. Elliott, mgr.)—"Lena Rivers" is doing well here this week. "The Two Orphans" Nov. 1, with Morris McHugh in his old role of Mother Frochard; "Graustark" 8. Ernestine Mohrle has succeeded Esther Rujaero as the heavy woman, and is said to be a very clever actress. Vaudeville between the acts will be offered, commencing 1, acts being supplied by William Morris, Inc. The opening vaudeville bill includes: Geo. W. Day, Ed. Foster and dog, De Faye Sisters, and Quaker City Quartette.

MUSICAL HUEHN.

PEOPLE'S (C. B. Marvin, mgr.)—Following the announcement last week that this house would be turned over to vaudeville, came Mr. Marvin's statement that he had decided to retain stock, but would serve vaudeville between the acts, and on matinee days would open at 2 with an act, then the play, with variety interspersed, and then follow with vaudeville between the matinee and night performances. This order starts Nov. 1, with "Hello, Bill!" as the first dramatic offering, in conjunction with the variety performers. Marie Nelson and Henry W. Rowell come from the College to start the ball rolling, replacing Maude Leone and Boyd Nolan, who, with others of the old company, drop out tomorrow night. "The Last Round Up" 8. Acts for the first week include: The Five Gardners, Dierickx Brothers, R. H. Bertram and company, Hickey's Comedy Circus, and illustrated songs and moving pictures.

ACADEMY (Wm. Roche, mgr.)—Capacity houses marked the return, 29, of Anne Bronaugh to the George Klimt Players, in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," but business slacked up during the week. Miss Bronaugh was given several enthusiastic receptions during the week, and played the title role very pleasingly. John Lane Connor, as the Earl of Dorincourt, gave one of the most sterling performances he has ever graced the stage with. Jew O. Hart was very funny as Mr. Hobbs, and played it in a most legitimate manner. Mark J. Elliston is entitled to a special word of credit for his remarkable characterization of Higgins, the farmer, on each performance getting a hearty round of applause on his exit. "Monte Cristo" 31, with John Lane Connor featured as Dantes, in which he made a tremendous hit last season with this same company. Manager Klimt promises a finer scenic production than ever. Isabelle Randolph and Thomas Swift, two of Chicago's favorite stock people, join the company Nov. 7, in "Secret Service."

MARLOWE (C. B. Marvin, mgr.)—"The Regeneration" has appealed strongly to the patrons of this house this week. "Our New Minister" Nov. 1, "Hello, Bill!" 8.

MAJESTIC (L. R. Glover, mgr.)—Bill week of 1 includes: Arturo Bernardi, Adelaide and company, with Johnny J. Hughes, Jock McKay, Fred Lindsay and company, "A Night in a Monkey Music Hall," "The Vital Question," Town Hall Minstrels, the Kemps, and the kinodrome.

AMERICAN (W. T. Grover, mgr.)—Bill week of 1 includes: Hassen and Jenny, Zay Holland, Johnson and Dean, Sidney Grant, Elvoll, Dorsch and Russell, Cecilia Loftus, Four Mortons, Rawson and June, and Americope.

HAYMARKET (W. F. Newkirk, mgr.)—Bill week of 1 includes: Tom Nawn and company, Vallecita's leopards, Lockwood and McCarty, Fred and Mae Waddell, Klimdt Bros., Irene Romaine, and George Alexander and the kinodrome.

STAR (T. J. Carmody, mgr.)—Bill week of 1 includes: Hyman Meyer, Village Choir, Flo Adler and Boy, Cecile Francois and company, the Shields, Follette and Wicks, Clever Conkey, Neuss and Eldred, and motion pictures.

CRITERION (Abe Jacobs, mgr.)—Bill week of 1 includes: Crane, Finley and company, Basque Quartette, the Arkansas, Appel and Rossi, Johnson, Marvelle and Mike, Winnie Crawford, and Melrose and Kennedy, and motion pictures.

BIJOU (Wm. Roche, mgr.)—"The Montana Limited" has been packing them to the doors this week, and is presented in a most praiseworthy manner, with an excellent company. "A Workingman's Wife" 31, "On the Suwanee River" Nov. 7. Being the only melodramatic house in the city now, this has the splendid patronage which its management deserves.

CALUMET (J. T. Connors, mgr.)—Manager Conors tells me that business is very flourishing in the city of South Chicago. "Graustark" and the Washington Society Girls make a happy medley of legitimate and burlesque, which the patrons were not slow in patronizing. "The Gambler of the West" 31-Nov. 3, "The Girl That's All the Candy" 4-6, "The Time, the Place and the Girl" 7-10, the Jolly Girls 11-13.

EUSON'S (S. J. Euson, mgr.)—Scribner's Show has done a wonderful business this week, and repeated the splendid impression it made in other sections of the city. It is worthy of crowded houses all the time. Manchester's Cracker Jacks come 31, in "The Innocent Girls," with Billy Hart, Frank Harcourt, Ruby Leoni and many others. The olio includes: Lillian Vedder, Great Piriscoffi's Troupe, La Belle Marie, Pearlson, Goldie and Lee, and the French Quaker Maidens. The Bon Tons Nov. 7.

FOLLY (J. A. Fennessey, mgr.)—Sam Devere's Co. scored a big success this week. The Cozy Corner Girls 31, Miss New York Jr. 7.

STAR AND GARTER (U. J. Herrmann, mgr.)—The Mardi Gras Beauties and Andy Lewis have had a good week here. The Behman Show 31, Rose Hill Nov. 7.

EMPIRE (I. H. Herk, mgr.)—The Broadway Gaiety Girls have done finely this week with a good offering. The Big Review 31, the Jolly Girls Nov. 7.

ALHAMBRA (Weber Bros., mgrs.)—The Cracker Jacks have pleased many this week. The Bon Tons 31, the Bowery Burlesquers Nov. 7.

LONDON DIME MUSEE (W. J. Sweeney, mgr.)—Business is picking up wonderfully here, and prospects are good for the best season the house has ever known.

JULIAN (J. G. Congerman, mgr.)—Bill week of 1 includes: Baker and Cornelia, Ed. Dunkhurst and company, Muriel Windrow, Blemso Bros., Harry Tsuda, Princeton and Yale, and motion pictures.

MABEL.—Bill week of 1 includes: Lottie Gilson and company, Ben Davis, the Albians, Peele and Francis, L. T. Johnstone, and Rose and Severans.

PRESIDENT.—Bill week of 1 includes: Yorrette and dog, Pauline De Vere, McCarthy and Barth, Waldo Whipple, Billy Moore, Virginia Grant, Imperial Trio, and Rentfrew and Jansen.

AFTERMATH.

The year old Newspaper Club of Chicago dedicated its new quarters, 91 Clark Street, Oct. 23, with a housewarming with a fine programme, on which appeared George Evans, Joe Howard, James C. Marlowe, Knox Wilson, Prof. H. F. Steinbach, Harry Pilcer, Lincoln Plumer, Eddie Heron, Charles Eldridge, Johnny Fogarty, Percy Jennings, Percy Leach, Augustus Carney, W. H. Denny, Frank Wright, William Elliott and Arthur Deagon.

Col. John D. Hopkins, the veteran theatrical manager, who died in St. Louis 24, was formerly well known in local circles, being at one time the manager of the People's Theatre, and later Hopkins', now the Folly. He was very successful here for a number of years, and there are many who remember him with gratitude.

The Chicago Chapter of the Actors' Church Alliance will hold monthly meetings hereafter, the first occurring at the Grand Pacific Hotel, Nov. 1, to which all members of the theatrical profession are cordially invited, as well as to all others in the future. A flower fund has been started with which to bring joy to the hearts of professional people in hospitals, and about $8 has already been subscribed.

Otis Harlan has been in town this week, following his closing with "The Broken Idol."

"The Girl in the Grand Stand" and "The Question of the Hour," both of which are in rehearsal at the present time, will shortly be seen on the local circuits, and are under the management of the Western Theatrical Co. Gillespie and Ward, the authors of the latter, have another piece, "Done in Oil," a rural comedy, which will be put in rehearsal later on.

The R. J. Weber Theatrical Agency, of St. Louis, has booked the following acts recently through advertising in THE CLIPPER: Two Owens, the Allmanns, Stein and Earle, Alvinos, Wagner and Gray, Gerlachs, Ford and Louise, Harper Children, Silverakes, Latours, Burns and Fell, Post and Gibson, Duvalls, Curtis and Curtis, Bennett and Norton, Billie Ward and Bernett Sisters, Stith and Stith, Davis and Hodge, Otto and Cartell, West and Denton, Ybur, Johnson Bros., Hoffmann and Dolores, Woods and Woods, Elliott and Le Roy, Schoene Trio, Glenn and Winnie Waggoner, Dunstan and Leslie, Two Jenniers, Musical Stingers, Ray and Golden, Stone and Leslie, Clark and Clifton.

The Sherman House site, Randolph and Clark Streets, was leased, 26, to Joseph Beifeld, for ninety-nine years, by Walter H. Wilson, trustee of the Francis C. Sherman estate. The site, which is on the Northwest corner, has a frontage on the two streets of 160x180 feet. This house has been a famous theatrical hostelry for many years, but is now rapidly being demolished to make room for the new Hotel Sherman.

The Auditorium was filled to capacity, afternoon of 24, when a grand concert was given for the benefit of the German Hospital of Chicago, $10,000 being netted for the worthy institution. Trained nurses, in the regulation uniforms, sold programmes, some of which brought $10 each, the total from this sale amounting to about $3,000. Among the operatic and concert stars who appeared, and all of whom were given a most enthusiastic welcome and performed splendidly, were Geraldine Farrar, Antonio Scotti and Mme. Samaroff.

CHICAGO AUDITORIUM CONCERTS OPEN.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, the American pianist; Riccardo Martin, the tenor, and the Chicago Philharmonic Orchestra opened the long-heralded Chicago Auditorium Sunday concerts on Oct. 31.

"THE EFFECT OF THE STORM," NEW TO VAUDEVILLE.

"The Effect of the Storm," a scenic and electrical vaudeville act, under the direction of Charles Wilford, was produced at Schindler's Theatre, Chicago, for the first time on any stage Oct. 25, and advices state that it immediately scored a big success. The idea of the act is said to be well worked out, and Wilford and Brown, who have the offering in charge, deserve a great deal of credit for the manner in which they have staged and carried it through.

Wireless telegraphy is a feature of the specialty, and the working of the instrument aroused enthusiasm in the audiences during the week. It is billed as "The Great $30,000 Electrical Act," and unquestionably a large sum of money has been expended on it.

THE GINNETTS FOR AMERICA.

King Rat Fred Ginnett, Mrs. Ginnett and Miss Ginnett arrived last week, to open for Wm. Morris Nov. 8. Their horse act, new to this country, is entitled "The Horse Dealer." It has been running for seven years in England, with four horses and five performers.

ARNOLD C. BALDWIN, leading man of Marks Bros.' Co., closed his own company at Little Falls, N. Y., after a very favorable season of fair dates, to accept a permanent stock engagement with Robt. Marks, who has leased the Grand Opera House at Ottawa, Can. Mr. Baldwin has been a featured leading man for Mr. Marks for eight years.

Notes From 101 Ranch Wild West.

The show is now nearing its thirtieth week, and our business still holds up, capacity every afternoon and big at night.

At Cape Girardeau, where we exhibited on "Taft Day" (Oct. 26), we were compelled to give three performances. The first performance at 10.30 A. M., which was absolute capacity; the second performance at 2 o'clock, to capacity, and at night we had a good average house, people being tired out with their hard day's excitement, which included the arrival of President Taft at 6 A. M., by boat. He was escorted by the bankers and business men's clubs of the city, who invoked the aid of J. C. Miller, who furnished them with fifty horses, to be used by the executives of the city in the Presidential parade. J. C. Miller, mounted on his beautiful Arabian charger, "Ben-Hur," accompanied by the principals of 101 Ranch Real Wild West, including cowboys, cowgirls, cossacks, Indians, standard bearers, Mexican vacquerros, and three bands of music, surrounded the President's automobile and headed the procession from the boat on the Mississippi River to the State Normal School, where the President delivered an address. The streets were beautifully decorated, and thousands of people vociferously applauded the procession along the entire line of march. The President and his party seemed highly delighted at the grand turnout presented by J. C. Miller, and seemed to enjoy the spectacle immensely.

The show will close its season at East St. Louis on Nov. 1, and will Winter in the large commodious buildings and plot formerly occupied by the National Iron Works at East St. Louis. The grounds contain a space of about ten acres with four large buildings, with electric lights and all modern machinery. Tracks are now being laid for the storage of the cars, and everything will be completed and in readiness for the reception of the show upon its arrival in East St. Louis. The plant is located on Broadway, near Eighteenth Street, and within twenty minutes riding distance of any point in St. Louis.

The show for the coming season will be very much enlarged in every department, and next year will see Miller Bros. and Arlington's 101 Ranch Real Wild West the largest organization of its kind in the country. A great many novelties have already been secured that are positively new to this country, features will be introduced that have never been seen before with a Wild West, and while this show has made a great reputation the past season, we expect to present an exhibition the coming season that will far surpass our last year's efforts.

J. C. Miller will Winter the horses, mules, buffalo and led stock on the 101 Ranch at Bliss, Okla.; Edward Arlington will go East to his home in Brooklyn; George Arlington will go on to New York for a short vacation, and then return to St. Louis; Fred Beckman will remain at Winter quarters in East St. Louis; Owen Doud, the legal representative, will pay a visit East for a short time and then return to St. Louis. Other members of the company will go to different parts of the United States, and the cowboys, cowgirls, Mexicans and Indians will return to the ranch and remain there until the opening of the show next season.

We wish to thank our friends for the many nice things they have said about the show the past season, and as the time draws nigh everybody is anxious for the close. We have had a long, pleasant and prosperous season. Au revoir until 1910.

Lubin.

"Let By-Gones Be By-Gones."—A convict has just been released, after serving a long term for stealing. He receives his pay and, wandering along aimlessly, the thought presents itself that perhaps a drink would cheer him. Entering a saloon the merry crowd soon causes him to forget. He seats himself at a table where two gamblers invite him to a game and quickly clean him out. Dragging himself along in a dazed condition he pauses in front of a church. The pastor, on his way home, takes him to his study to administer food and consolation. How ill he repays the pastor can be imagined when the old thievish instinct asserts itself and he quietly emerges from the place with the golden chalice. This he tries to dispose of to a couple of rustics, who, recognizing the piece, overpower him and take him back to the pastor, who promptly forgives him. Right then and there the ex-convict resolves forever after to lead an upright life. Five years have passed. He is happily married and the father of a child which he adores. He has become a skilled mechanic, working faithfully at his trade. One of the farmers who knew of his former guilt never ceases to inform his employers of his past. He is dismissed and goes from one job to another, only to be denounced by the hardened accuser. His old benefactor, the pastor, becomes again his champion and, knowing his change of heart, speaks in his behalf to his employer. They investigate his present life, learn of his earnestness, of his honesty, of his home life and uprightness, and decide that he deserves better fate, so the employer offers him a position for life.

"Brave Women of '76."—Men with the lust of battle in their souls—the inspiration of the drum beat, the wild charges to victory—or death—something at least to give an impetus to the jaded toiler. But the wives and daughters the aching heart—the solitary hearth. To them be no less glory. A little company has left a village for the front. The women are left alone. Word reaches the captain that a party of Hessian Cavalry anticipate a descent on the place, and circumstances preventing his being there, he sends a message of warning. His wife and daughter quickly summon all the neighbor-women, and with guns and any implement handy they hasten to repel the foe. Over a small stream is a bridge which they fire. The Hessians advance, but thinking an ambuscade prepared for them, depart in disorder. The women win the day and are marching home triumphantly, when to their surprise they overtake a regiment, which proves to be their own local company. The wives and sweethearts, with characteristic disregard of military discipline, lovingly embrace their own, and the company is overjoyed at the reunion.

"A Lesson in Palmistry."—A young lady has a fight with her best fellow. To make sure that he really loves her she decides to consult a palmist. The young man, learning of her decision, impersonates the palmist, and she soon learns that he really loves her.

Edison.

"A Man with Three Wives."—The desire to placate a wealthy uncle leads a young married man into a subterfuge whose workings are a "scream" from beginning to end. This film is a leader among farcical pictures.

"His Masterpiece."—An impoverished old musician, whose inspiration has failed to win appreciation, finds a valuable piece of jewelry. Though starving, he returns it to its owner, and thereby meets a noted impresario, who recognizes his genius and becomes his patron. The picture concludes with a reproduction of the famous painting, "Beethoven."

"A Bride and Groom's Visit to the New York Zoological Gardens."—An exceedingly interesting and instructive trip through the zoo, into which is cleverly introduced a bit of comedy. The camera man did his work wonderfully well, catching the various animals in their most characteristic poses and habits.

Gaumont.

"Ursula" is the title of a film showing the movements of the fastest boat in the world.

Cleveland, and the following acts will be on the first week: Nov. 1-3—The Veronas, the Blinkleys and Theo, Camille and La Jesse; 4-6—Four English Belles, O'Neil Trio, and Johnny Fields.

A Book of Moving Picture Music.

Gregg A. Frelinger, of Lafayette, Ind., a prominent pianist and teacher of music, has compiled and published a musical work which will be of special interest to those who play in the motion picture houses. It contains incidental music to fit pictures of all kinds, some of the music being Mr. Frelinger's own composition, and other selections from old familiar airs. The author has had years of experience playing in vaudeville theatre, and for the past two years has been playing at the Arc Theatre in order to perfect his book.

Moving Picture News in Philadelphia.

A contract has been awarded for the erection of a moving picture and vaudeville theatre, to measure 98 by 120 feet, and with a seating capacity of 1,000, at Fifty-second and Sansom Streets, for the Crescent Amusement Co. The cost will be $25,000.

A contract has also been awarded for the erection of the big studio building at Twentieth Street and Indiana Avenue for the Lubin Manufacturing Co., which will be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of films for moving pictures. The plans provide for two structures, each 50 by 200 feet, to cost $45,000.

Everything is in readiness for the opening on Nov. 1 of Frank McGone's big theatre, which he has erected at Broad and Porter streets at a cost of $60,000. While primarily intended for vaudeville and moving pictures, it is to all intents a completely equipped theatre, minus the galleries. It occupies a lot 100 by 180 feet, has a seating capacity of 1,600, with a stage 50 feet wide at the proscenium arch. Two performances nightly will be given, with the admission at ten and twenty cents. There will also be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The opening bill will be headed by Powers' elephants, and six other vaudeville numbers.

Independent Meeting.

One of the first things President J. J. Murdock did upon his return was to call a special meeting of the executive committee of the National Independent Moving Picture Alliance, and all members have wired their intention to be present, and a number of vital matters will be taken up and acted upon.

During his visit to Europe, accompanied by E. J. Magerstadt, treasurer of the company, they made it plain to all of the manufacturers on the other side that it is essential that the practise of having their goods reach this country through other channels should be stopped. So, at their invitation, representatives of all the manufacturers have arrived in New York to arrange for a bonded agreement by which none of the goods are to be released in Europe until after they have been released in this country.

AT THE OLD

HOWARD

BOSTON'S BRIGHEST, BIGGEST AND BEST BURLESQUES

WEEK OF NOV. 1, 1909, BOSTON, MASS.

TAR

We've got a girly bunch of charmers on the lumber this week that knock the tar out of anything in the shirt line. Sam T. Jack's Tar-Rah-Rah's are here with "bibs on" and will put you through the three degrees in the society "Get Wise to Yourself." It's the only real live organization that's really up-to-date. The Jolly Tars and Jack's Jackies will have you about half seas over the moment they pull away from the dock, so it's up to you to be on hand when they hoist their "Good Cheer Flag" and sail. You hear a whole lot of breezings nowadays "about the self-made man," so we want to have a little to say about "the self-made maid." Girls who leave home, mother and the three squares to join a burlesque company must have the goods to make good. Voice and figure cut a whole lot, but ability counts for its full share and if you'll roll over and rub your blinks a bit we'll open your eyes to a few things this week. This show has gone all along the line smashing records right and left and putting all other girly troupes down for the count. If it's as good as the boosts that have come over the wire, then all Boston boys are due to have their sleep hours cut short. If your up and doing, the Old Howard's the place.

SAM. T. JACK'S

JACKIES

ANOTHER RIP, ROARING WESTERN WHEEL RIPPER

TOM MINER'S BREEZER

It will be up to you to get shore leave with this bunch of Jackies in town. This is the batch that knows the full game from pistol to tape, and will send the laugh wrinkles greeting each other in merry reunion. Every one a member of the "Live Wire" club, so be careful and keep off the third rail. We have boosted girls good and strong all the season, but this is the company that is head and shoulders over everything piped in Boston. They top them all and it will be a case of cleaning out the rack at every show. That's traveling just a little. The dainty, dreamy dazzlers are prepared to unload the brightest kind of mirthings and you can just sit back and chuckle to your heart's content. They will open up in a little screechlet entitled

Girls in Girl-Land

The world would indeed be the slowest kind of a joint to live in without silk stocking lassies dancing around to keep us amused. It will be one long merry jumble of fun and nonsense all the way, and there will be no dull moments—not with a Jack show. Blanche Washburn comes pretty near being the whole rumble in the feminine department, and Patsy Burke and May Beatrice are as smooth as velvet. All Howard Johnnies, Willies and Percys remember that tall, stately brunette who kept them all guessing when last here. Nan Carr is considered the "find" of the season, and she's a real scoop for the Jacks. Flo Owens and Winnie Crowe are a couple of birds who have had their wings clipped and among the other jolliers include Edna Howard, Aldah Christie, Maude Hamilton, Carry Young, Iva Stuart, Catherine Crawford, Caroline Wilcox, Anna Fields, Marion Campbell, Ray Weiner, May Martin and Hilda Raymond.

Teddy in the Jungle

is the title of one of the side lights of humor and if you want to orb a real "delight'ed" jungle-lander here's where you journey through darkest Africa. It looks pretty soft from the street for good hunting in jungletown. Abe Leavitt talks with his hands as well as with his enunciator and as a Hebrew funister he's the limit. Eddie Barto can tickle the boards in the nimblest fashion and Bob Francisco, Joe Fisher, Charles Douglas, Rube Welch and Arthur Young will be on the "position" good and strong. Don't forget to stick for the Bombazoo song and "Pansie's Mean Thoughts." They're truly up-to-the-minute, in fact, a little ahead of the calendar. That's the kind of stuff that shows at the Howard.

Also the Old

HOWARD

Joy Jugglers

We've kept the cable clear this year with the brightest kind of joy-makers and now that the lever is on in full force we intend to stick hard at it. We'll open the big funfest with a cannonade of screams from assisted by Miss Florence Wells. They parcel a dido, stencilled, "In the Days of '61." Pat as the old Irish veteran of the New York 71st creates all kinds of humor and that he has seen service on the field is what you'll believe when he cuts loose. Miss Wells will chime some Irish ballads that'll make you think of the old sod. Next in line comes Fan and Mazie Trumbull, two Hoosier lassies who have been getting the coin for an act that's as good as the best. They sing, yap and dance in a manner that makes you forget to telephone wifey. The Waldron Bros. do the guillotine to the German language—their frankfort specialty is a hot dog. You won't give a rap what becomes of you after hearing La Centra and La Rue in a postscript edition of the latest stuff. Althea Morrison as a singing comedienne is in the class with the classiest and hits straight from the shoulder with her joyjolts. The slickest an I most graceful duo of hand balancers and gymnasts are the Houghtons and you'll get all that's a-coming in the athletic line. Perhaps the biggest yell among Italian specialists is William Sisto. He has a political speech in his budget that is the richest thing that ever came down the path. Billy also does the topsy-turvy to the native tongue. Riley and Berkeley are billed as "foot tanglers" and their rapid steppings will keep your eyes to the front. Then comes the fleeting funny Howardscope films—everything new. Always something doing from 1 till 11 at the Old Howard.

Richy Craig's Big Hit.

Richy W. Craig can certainly hang his hat up in Cincinnati any time he so desires. He has repeated earlier successes with the Cozy Corner Girls.

A Capitalized Chuckle.

Johnny Weber has a chuckle which is one of the real assets of the Rose Sydell London Belles. Cincinnatians imitated it during the stay of the show at the Standard.

ED DAVIDSON has closed as agent with Tom Miner's Bohemians, and is now manager of the Johnson-Ketchel fight pictures.

FRANK FINNEY is writing a new show for Louis Roble.

F. R. DOHERTY, press agent of the Old Howard, Boston, was in New York last week looking over the field. Mr. Doherty's breezy ads furnish good reading for the patrons of THE CLIPPER, as well as for the Boston readers.

WRITTEN AND COLLATED EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

A MINSTREL "GAG."

INTERLOCUTOR.—Mr. Bones, I was just going to ask you something, but I'll postpone the question, for here comes Brother Cusick, with his banjo over his shoulder and the strings all broken, and he looks as if he'd been having a row with somebody.

[Enter Sam Cusick, dejectedly.]

INT.—How, now, Brother Cusick? You seemed plunged in melancholy.

CUSICK.—Dat what you call it? I bin plunged into a pile o' slacked lime—dat's what's de matter! Got into de fust railroad car I cum across to come ober to de hall, but de 'ductor didn't 'preciate music, so he ducked me in de lime puddle, an' I made a hoss collar ober de head of a man, wid my banjo, trying to git out.

INT.—Indeed. That must have provoked your choler, and I don't wonder you showed horse-tility.

CUSICK.—You bet it did! Tore off de only collar I had, and de shirt near cum wid it. But I got even.

INT.—You got even?

CUSICK.—I did dat. I went into de dry goods store dat de lime belong to, I was so mad, and sitting down on de sol fa—

INT.—The sofa, you mean, sir.

CUSICK.—Well, de so-far; I ax for de boss, and says I, right amongst all de ladies, says I:—"Bossy, don't you want to get a genteel clerk here, bossy? I'll come cheap." "Then you're just the feller I don't want," says he, "it'd take half my stock to refit you." And I went out, leaving a broad streak of whitewash behind me. If he did reject me, it couldn't a bin on de 'count of my color.

INT.—That was evident. Well, sir, what did you do next?

CUSICK.—I went ober to de office ob de Mornin' Rostrum to state de facts ob de case and demand satisfaction.

INT.—Ah! That does credit to your judgment. Of course, they redressed you?

CUSICK.—Guess not—got de same clothes on yet. Dey was mitey cibbil, and said a good deal about de negro an' all dat, an' drew up a "card" for me to publish, an' charged me ten dollars for it, an' I hadn't it, and dat's de reason I guess dat it didn't go in.

INT.—You was pretty well car'd already, I should imagine.

CUSICK.—Yes, bossy, but I didn't car' for dat. I wanted to git damages, and dat's what I tole de clerk. An' he says, says he, "I'll gub you damages;" and wid dat he roll me down de steps ob de press room, an' de pressman dipped me in de ink troff, and de boys laff, and I crawled out like a fly out ob a molasses jug. And dey said "Shoo fly!" when I disappeared 'roun' de corner.

INT.—Having inked you, I should have struck you off—taken an impression.

CUSICK.—Same ting; dey struck my name off deir prosecription list, and jus' den when I was gwine 'roun' de corner to go home, a ashman hove his ash-barrel, and I got de whole table o' contents all over; an' de ashes stuck to de ink, and de ink stuck to de mortar, and de mortar stuck to my clothes, an' I yelled out:—"Let me be!" and came over h'yar to take up a prescription.

INT.—Well, Cusick, give us a jig and we'll see what can be done for you; and then Jumper Brignoli will sing us his latest song about

THE GOOD OLD NEW YORK GENTLEMAN.

Come listen, friends and neighbors, while a story I relate,
Of a hale and hearty gentleman well known in every state;
A man of weight and influence among the rich and great,
Who owns within Manhattan's bounds a flourishing estate—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time.

He was the special favorite of all, I've heard it said,
Who lived within his range, and on all sides his favors shed;
And stocks would rise and stocks would fall whene'er he'd shake his head,
While in his frown there lurked a spell made thousands quake with dread,
And yet was so awfully fraternal and condescending to those who'd nary red,
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

He loved good living, and could drink of lager beer a tun,
And meet him when you would, 'tis said, was running o'er with fun.
And oft upon the stump his eloquence our ears would stun,
Until the fight waxed fierce and hot, and, by the exercise of his peculiar powers of persuasion, he had compelled his enemies to run—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

He knew the winning cards by heart, and when in a tight place
Could save himself and fill his purse by coppering on the ace;
He knew the winning horses, too, and won at every race,
And wasn't in the least afraid a pistol's mouth to face.
And if anybody thought of arresting him for any of his little peccadilloes the probability is that before they caught him they'd have a most exciting chase—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time.

He owned a railroad to himself and ate a silver mine,
And 'mid the tippiest of the ton on evenings used to shine,
Besides a few score lots or so on the city's boundary line,
And if he hadn't sold them he'd have had them still, and his elegant establishment, and his dogs and his horses and his troops of friends, and a great many other things too numerous to mention, I opine—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

But every dog must have his day, and so it chanced at last
This good old soul, whose only fault was that he lived too fast,
Himself was forced to feel the blight of stern misfortune's blast;
He rallied, but alas! for him the fatal die was cast.
He gave up his wines and his hounds and his horses, his little parties, his excursions, his yachts and his youthful frivolities and into oblivion passed—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

NEW YORK CITY.

Lyric Theatre (Sol Manheimer, mgr.)—William Faversham has undertaken a gigantic task in the production of Stephen Phillips' three act play, Herod, and to his credit it may truthfully be said that he has done wonders with it. There is true majesty and dignity in the Phillips dramatization, and Mr. Faversham has given every department of the production a conscientious attention that is most apparent. The piece was given for the first time in New York on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, and a big audience gave it the close attention and warm expressions of favor that it deserved. The massive stage setting, showing the Great Hall of Audience in the Palace of Herod, at Jerusalem, pictured a series of steps leading up to a terrace which overlooked the city. Big columns supported a beautiful canopy, and before the palace door, on one side of the stage, were the braziers of burning incense. The picture was complete, and the hundred or more supernumeraries gave color and action to the scenes. The tragic incidents of the story were at times led up to with melodramatic development that seemed out of place in this beautiful word picture in blank verse, but the language was in the main impressive and fancifully poetic, and there was action to suit the most fastidious, except in certain portions of the first and second acts, where the story lagged a little. Mr. Phillips has written a big play, and Mr. Faversham has matched the author's ambitious conception by his intelligent staging of the piece. As Herod the star effectually disguised himself, and left behind many of the stilted mannerisms that have long marred his work. He made the character convincing in almost every scene, and during the latter part of the play he was especially effective. In fact, this seems to be his most artistically presented role, as well as his most ambitious one. Julie Opp, as Mariamne, queen and wife of Herod, had all the biggest part of the honors in the first and second acts, for her role in point of intensity overshadowed all the others. She made every line sink home, too, and won a real triumph. Burton Churchill, as Sohemus, a Gaul, who is entrusted with the killing of Aristobulus, the queen's brother, pitched his performance in just the right key, and gave a vivid, stirring portrayal of the part. He was rewarded with a hearty burst of applause for his death scene and a great fall from the top of the terrace steps. A. Hylton Allen, as Aristobulus, did work of a most commendable nature, and Lionel Belmore, as the Messenger from Egypt, made the role stand out by his skill in acting it. H. Cooper Cliffe, as Cadias, the chief councillor, made the character a little of a buffoon, but as it was apparently drawn in that manner, he is to be praised for doing well with it. Olive Oliver gave a performance of strength and excellent effect as Salome, Herod's sister, and Helen Tracy was effective as the King's mother. Morton Selton was mis-cast as the brother of Herod. Mr. Phillips makes Herod kill Aristobulus by commanding Sohemus to drown the young High Priest while the latter is bathing, and then, when Mariamne, the queen, turns from Herod in loathing after learning that he had murdered her brother, Herod commands that she, too, be killed. The later scenes show Herod verging on the brink of madness, and unforgetful of the fact that Mariamne is dead. Finally he has her body brought before him, and in horror and remorse he is stricken as he gazes upon it. The cast: Herod, Mr. Faversham; Pheroras, Morton Selton; Aristobulus, A. Hylton Allen; Gadias, H. Cooper Cliffe; Sohemus, Burton Churchill; Physician, Alexander Calvert; Priest, Warren Conlan; Councillor, Harry Redding; Cup Bearer, Melville G. Roscnow; Syllacus, Earl Q. Snider; Roman Envoy, Frank Thomas; Messenger, Lionel Belmore; Attendant, Pickering Brown; Sentinel, Leon Brown; Captain, Charles H. Hudson Theatre (Henry B. Harris, mgr.)—This house was dark Monday night, Oct. 25, and opened night of 26 with the first metropolitan production of The Builder of Bridges, a play in four acts, by Alfred Sutro, which is serving this season as a starring vehicle for Kyrle Bellew, under Charles Frohman's management. The play, which was given its first American presentation Sept. 30, at the Majestic Theatre, Utica, N. Y., has for its central figure Edward Thursfield, a mechanical engineer, who has become famous as a builder of bridges. He is the right hand man of Sir Henry Killick & Co., of London, Eng., bridge builders, and is assigned to all of the important bridge constructions of the firm in various parts of the world. Although a man about forty years of age, Thursfield has never been in love, his reason being that he was always too shy. In the employ of the firm is Arnold Faringay, a young man who six weeks prior to the beginning of the play has robbed the firm of £3,000 to pay debts incurred through bucketshop speculations. His sister, Dorothy, who is engaged to one Walter Gresham, is devotedly attached to her brother, and to save him conceives a plan to win the love of Thursfield, whose influence with the firm is strong, and induce him to save her brother, after which she plans to throw Thursfield over and marry Gresham. To this end she goes to a hotel in Switzerland, where her intended victim is, wins his love and returns his promised wife. Arnold, ashamed of what he has done, confesses his theft to Thursfield, who, because Arnold is Dorothy's brother, saves him by paying the money out of his own pocket. Dorothy now finds that she really loves Thursfield and tells Gresham the story of Arnold's theft, omitting her duplicity, and insists that Gresham must refund the money. Gresham by his hesitancy gives her the opportunity to break their engagement, which she does. Then Thursfield and Gresham meet, and the wretched story becomes known. Dorothy has duped them both. Thursfield is to go to Rhodesia to build a bridge, and Dorothy convinces him that she really loves him. He takes her to his arms and the curtain falls. From this story it will be seen that Mr. Sutro has taken upon himself the Herculean task of producing a play, the central female character of which is the worst kind of a moral coward. She is not a young girl, but a woman of twenty-six, yet her ideas of honor are so warped that she stoops to the despicable act of winning the love of an honest man to save a thief from punishment. With such a weakness it is little wonder that Mr. Sutro has not succeeded in writing a play that holds the interest. And yet, in spite of this, he has proved himself capable at character drawing and has created several excellent types in his work. Kyrle Bellew imbued the character of Edward Thursfield with his own pleasing personality, and made him a man who wins the respect and confidence of those around him. In his hands Thursfield is a man of force and determination, self-reliant and masterful. Mr. Bellew has probably never done better work than he does in this piece, and this fact, coupled with his popularity and the capital acting of several members of his company, may save the play and carry to at least moderate success. Eugene O'Brien had an unpleasant task in portraying the role of Arnold Farlugay, but by his tact and good acting won well deserved favor. His work in a scene at the close of act two was a surprise. It was a difficult scene to handle to avoid being ludicrous, but he did it so delicately that he was given an ovation. De Witt C. Jennings was delightfully breezy in the role of Sir Henry Killick. Mrs. Thomas Whiffen scored one of the decided hits of the performance in the role of Mrs. Debney. Gladys Hanson did good work as Dorothy, but the handicap placed upon her by the author was more than any actress could overcome entirely. The others did well. The cast in full: Edward Thursfield, Kyrle Bellew; Arnold Faringay, Eugene O'Brien; Wailes Gresham, Frank Connor; Sir Henry Killick, De Witt C. Jennings; Peter Holland, Ernest Stallard; Dorothy Faringay, Gladys Hanson; Mrs. Debney, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen; Miss Closson, Jane May; Minnie, Frances Comstock. The second week began Nov. 1.

Supreme Court Justice Dowling has appointed a referee to take an accounting in the suit brought by Klaw & Erlanger against Felix Isman to recover a share of the losses sustained in the production of "The Grand Mogul" in 1907. According to the complaint Isman made an agreement with the plaintiffs in 1906 by which he was to receive 20 per cent. of the profits, if there were any, and was to bear 25 per cent. of the losses.

"The Grand Mogul" proved unsuccessful and according to Klaw & Erlanger Mr. Isman refused to make good his share of the loss, and the result was a suit. Judgment was rendered by consent of both parties, and this was followed by the request of Klaw & Erlanger asking for an accounting.

MINISTERS ON THE STAGE.

Church Services to Be Given for Benefit of Theatrical People.

The church and labor department of the American Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church hopes to conduct services in many of the vaudeville theatres of New York City. The first service will be held on Wednesday night, Nov. 3, in the American Theatre, after the last act on the regular house bill is over. On that occasion the Rev. Dr. Wilton Merle Smith will conduct a service for the performers and stage employees of the theatre.

Another meeting will soon be held at the Plaza Music Hall, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. The meetings, it is said, will last not more than half an hour, and while arranged for performers and employees of the theatre, people in the audience may stay if they desire. The meetings will consist of prayer, brief Scripture reading and a short address.

According to present plans, the minister will begin his service just as the curtain goes down on the last act, while the performers are still in their stage apparel.

Among the ministers who have promised to preach are: The Rev. Dr. George Alexander, University Place Church; the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, Old First Church; the Rev. Dr. Edwin F. Hallenbeck, acting pastor of the Fifth Avenue Church, at Fifty-fifth Street; the Rev. Dr. Smith, the Rev. Robert Davis, the Rev. The keys will be transmitted to the architects and later to Mr. Morgan. They were made for the theatre by Mrs. William C. Deming, a worker in silver.

The programme will begin with an overture by the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra. Then will come the delivery of the keys. Mr. Morgan will make a speech of acknowledgment, and will formally declare the New Theatre open. After the speeches the chorus from the Metropolitan will sing an ode written by Percy Macaye.

The guests will return at 8 o'clock to witness a dress rehearsal of "Antony and Cleopatra," which will be played at the regular opening on Monday night, Nov. 8. The rehearsal will be a complete performance.

After a serious attack of inflammatory rheumatism which kept him in bed for almost four weeks, Leo Edwards, the "harmonious" brother of Gus Edwards, is back at his desk, looking better than ever, having lost almost twenty-five pounds, which will be much in his favor, as he was putting on a little too much weight when last seen. It was his illness that kept him from appearing with his brother at Hammerstein's. His many professional friends will be glad to have his assistance again when selecting from the many hits of the Gus Edwards catalogue the songs most suitable for their acts, as they have great confidence in his ability to choose material that will benefit the performer most, quartettes in particular.

Deaths in the Profession

William H. Crompton.

William H. Crompton, the veteran actor, died in the Elks' Room at the Post Graduate Hospital, New York City, on Saturday, Oct. 23, and was buried on Oct. 25 in Elks' Rest, Mount Hope Cemetery, Boston, after services in the Elks' Building, in Hayward Place.

Mr. Crompton was born in Manchester, Eng., in 1843. It was his father's desire that he should enter into mercantile life, but the prospect was distasteful to him, and, in order to put into execution his own cherished plans, he came to America in 1866. He made his first professional appearance at Barnum's Museum, New York City, in July, 1867, in "Nobody's Daughter." His next engagement was at the Old Bowery Theatre, in August of the same year.

He remained there for three years as assistant stage manager, under N. B. Clarke, during which time he played in nearly everything produced. In the Fall of 1870 he went to Pittsburg, as prompter and general utility, afterwards becoming stage manager of the Grand Opera House and first old man, and finally treasurer and general business manager, under J. N. Gotthold. He was one of the last of the stock company in that city.

Leaving there in 1877 he appeared at the Broadway Theatre, New York City (now Daly's), under the management of Edgar & Fulton, in support of Ada Cavendish, Rose Eytinge, Geo. Edgar, John Albaugh and many others. Afterwards he was for two years with James A. Herne in his famous production, "Hearts of Oak." Then followed an engagement under the Madison Square Theatre management, during which he toured the United States, in "Hazel Kirke" and "Esmeralda," in the first of which he played over five hundred times, and in the latter nearly three hundred times.

He was then engaged for the part of Uncle Bartlett, in "May Blossom," which he played over seven hundred times throughout the country. His next engagement was with May Fortesque, whom he accompanied upon her American tour, after which he joined the forces of the Boston Theatre, under the management of Eugene Tompkins, in his production of "The Run of Luck."

He was engaged by Richard Mansfield for his European tour in 1887, upon his return from which he played the principal comedy roles with Julia Marlowe. He afterwards returned to Mr. Mansfield when that star produced "Beau Brummel" and remained with him two years. He then signed with Chas. Frohman for the part of Andrew Knowlton, in "The Lost Paradise," and under the same management created the part of Adam Cherry, in "The Councillor's Wife." Later Mr. Crompton became a member of the stock company at the Empire Theatre, New York City. He was for a long time a member of the stock company at that theatre, remaining with it, in fact, until its dissolution. He later appeared with William Gillette and with Sothern and Marlowe. Of late years he appeared frequently in Shakespearean productions, playing in support of E. H. Sothern. His last engagement was with Billie Burke, in "Love Watches." He accompanied Miss Burke to England, and appeared with her in "Love Watches" here when she returned. Ernest, conscientious and painstaking, Mr. Crompton deservedly won great renown. Of keen insight, and possessing excellent judgment, he carefully noted the minor differences of character, and thereby gave infinite variety to his portrayals. His humor was always delicate, and by look, gesture and tone he conveyed the tenderest pathos.

Mrs. James Henry Hackett.

Mrs. James Henry Hackett, widow of James Henry Hackett, the actor, and mother of James K. Hackett, died on Wednesday, Oct. 27, in her home, No. 262 West Ninety-fourth Street, New York City. She had been ill several months, and a fortnight ago was stricken with paralysis.

Mrs. Hackett was the second wife of James Henry Hackett, the celebrated actor of "Falstaff" and "Rip Van Winkle." She was born in Lawrence County, New York, seventy-five years ago. In her girlhood her family removed to Wolf Island, Canada, where she met her husband, to whom she was married in 1868. James K. Hackett is her only child.

After the death of her husband Mrs. Hackett was thrown upon her own resources, and the panic of 1873 dissipated the fortune left by the elder Hackett. Mrs. Hackett then took up a stage career and appeared with success for a time in "Macbeth" and "Leah, the Forsaken." Interment was at Jamaica, L. I.

William L. ("Billy") Gleason, a veteran actor, died Oct. 20 in a sanitarium at Fruitville, near Oakland, Cal. Mr. Gleason was fifty-nine years old and a native of Ireland. He began his theatrical career in Cincinnati, O., at the close of the Civil War, in which he served as a boy. He was for six years stage director at Ye Liberty Theatre in San Francisco, Cal. Subsequently, from 1906 until he went to San Francisco in ill health several months ago, Mr. Gleason and his wife, Mina Gleason, were with the Baker Stock company in Portland, Ore. Gleason was familiarly known as "Daddy." Besides his widow, a son, James A. Gleason, an actor, survives. Interment was in Oakland on Oct. 22.

Mlle. Bertha, Dutch comedienne and statue performer, whose name in private life was Bertha Schwartz, died on Saturday, Oct. 23, from cancer, at the home of her daughter in Chicago, Ill., where she had been living for the past six months. She had been on the stage from childhood, but retired about twenty years ago. She was the widow of Prof. Peter A. Schwartz, a well known musician and composer, who died fourteen years ago. She leaves two children, a daughter, Blanche, and son, Charles, who is a musician of Pittsburg, Pa. Interment was in Pittsburg, where the deceased had lived for a number of years.

Carl Sobeski, well known as a lyric baritone and teacher of voice culture, died at a private hospital in Brookline, Mass., on Oct. 28, aged forty-five, following two operations for acute indigestion. He was a native of Denmark, and came to this country when a small boy. He developed great musical talent, and was sent abroad to study. For some years he maintained a studio on Huntington Avenue, Boston. He composed a number of lyric songs.

Count Augusto Fantoni, formerly a playwright, died, unknown and in poverty, in the J. Hood Wright Hospital, New York City, on Tuesday night, Oct. 26, after a two weeks' illness, from a stroke of paralysis. He was formerly a lieutenant in the Italian Navy, and afterward turned his attention to the writing of plays, in which, it is said, that he was at first very successful. Later he came to this country, where he did not do quite so well, and recently had been acting as correspondent of the French journal, Gil Blas. He had two daughters, living in Italy. Interment was in Calvary Cemetery, N. Y.

Georgia Lester, a well known actress, and widow of Dave H. Woods, a theatrical manager and playwright, died on Oct. 23, aged forty-five years. She had been upon the stage since she was five years of age, and remained in active service until about seven weeks before her death. About four years ago she lost her husband, who died suddenly, and she never seemed to have recovered from the shock. Up to the time of her husband's death she went by her own name of Georgia Lester, but afterwards she was known as Georgia Lester Woods. She came of a long line of professionals, her father being a one time well known theatrical man, named Lyster. During her early career Miss Lester had been with Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Thomas Keene, Joseph Jefferson, Mme. Janauschek, Mary Anderson and Maggie Mitchell. She was also with Kiralfy Bros. in many of their spectacles. She appeared under the management of Col. Sinn, and was with the old Boston Theatre Co. and at Wood's Museum, New York City, which at that time played stock, with traveling stars. It was in these stock companies, when she was very young, that Miss Lester received her early training. Since her husband's death she played stock engagements, and also appeared in a company presenting "The Two Orphans," in which her daughter, Jessamine Woods, had a prominent role. Miss Lester was then with "The Little Organ Grinder," "David Corson" and "The Clansman." Her daughter, Jessamine Woods, also an actress, survives her. Interment was in Ohio, beside the body of her husband.

Patrick A. Nannery, an actor, aged sixty-five years, who lived at the Arlington Hotel, 275 West Thirty-eighth Street, New York City, died suddenly in his apartments on Sunday, Oct. 31. The doctor said that death was due to heart disease. Mr. Nannery had not been well for a week, but it was not thought that his illness was serious. Little is known at the hotel of the dead man, except that he had been an actor for more than thirty years, appearing in many well known productions. As far as is known at the hotel, he had no relatives. His body and belongings were taken to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station.

Campbell Bros.' Shows.

Campbell Bros.' Shows will close the 1909 season at White City, Kansas, Nov. 6, after a tour of twenty-nine weeks through eleven states and four Canadian provinces, covering a total of 11,634 miles. Although not the most profitable in the history of the show, the season has been a pleasant one in more ways than one, with but few accidents, only one blowdown and not many performances missed.

The weather for the greater part of the season was as good as could be desired, with only a few rainy days in the Spring, and very little cold weather at the close of the season. Many of the performers have again signed with this show for next season, while others will be identified with circuses. After the end of the season the show will be packed away in Winter quarters at Fairbury, Neb., the Winter being devoted to getting everything in readiness for next Summer's opening.

RAY AND GOLDEN are playing Weber's vaudeville time out of St. Louis, Mo., and report doing well.

Burlesque.

Gerard's Show Doing Well.

"Town Talk" broke all records for burlesque receipts in Milwaukee last week. On Thursday night the house was sold out for the week, and Barney Gerard jumped on to Minneapolis to get things started, as he is going after the record of every house along the line. The total reached $4,714 in Milwaukee, and at the low prices prevailing there, this is phenomenal. "Town Talk" is all its name implies, and now has in its roster: Louie Dacre, Charley Burkhart, "the man with the funny slide," and Zbyszko, the Polish wrestler, who joined the show last week.

Follies of the Day is also doing phenomenal business and closed a big week at Miner's Eighth Avenue Theatre, its first New York engagement since the Lincoln Square Theatre. Mr. Gerard has been with "Town Talk" the past few weeks, as has Jack McNamara, the latter remaining with the show for the balance of the season, being transferred from the Follies.

METROPOLIS IN BURLESQUE RANKS.

The Columbia Amusement Co. has signed a lease with Hurtig & Seamon for the rest of the season to play Eastern wheel shows at the Metropolis. The burlesque seasons opens Monday, Nov. 8, with the Marathon Girls. This engagement for the Marathon Girls takes the place of the open week of the Casino, Boston, Mass.

The Metropolis will be in opposition to the Western wheel house which will be opened in the Bronx, by the Miners, in March. The Metropolis is the first house in that territory to play burlesque.

New Eastern Wheel Houses to Open.

The College Girls will open the Gayety, Kansas City; the Columbia Girls will open the Gayety, Minneapolis, Nov. 13. The Casino will open about Dec. 15.

CHAS. E. FOREMAN, manager of Fads and Follies Co., writes: "I was married to May Walsh, of this company, in Buffalo, N. Y., on Tuesday, Oct. 26."

Are Your Trunks Bal-built?

If not, they are not as well built as trunks can be built. Not only in the material used, but in the method of construction, the BAL FIBRE TRUNK is different from any other trunk manufactured. By being different, they make the LIGHTEST, STRONGEST and MOST SERVICEABLE THEATRICAL TRUNKS ON EARTH.

Boston, Mass.—Stair, Wilbur & Magee have made arrangements whereby the Grand Opera House will return to its old policy of playing both musical and melodramatic attractions and also the higher class of dramas. The change went into effect on Oct. 25, with the play of "Arizona."

TREMONT (John B. Schoeffel, mgr.)—"The Love Cure" opened Nov. 1. Lina Abarbanell and Charles J. Ross are the principals, and are ably supported by a large company.

MAJESTIC (Wilbur-Shubert Co., mgrs.)—"The Rose of Algeria" commenced, 1, the first of a two weeks' engagement. The comedy is interpreted by a company of one hundred, and the leading role is played by Lillian Herlein.

COLONIAL (Frohman, Rich & Harris, mgrs.)—Elsie Janis, in "The Fair Co-Ed," this week. This play is new to Boston, and the character fits her perfectly. Her imitations of some of the stage celebrities are excellent.

HOLLIS STREET (Frohman, Rich & Harris, mgrs.)—Grace George, in Thompson Buchanan's "A Woman's Way," began a two weeks' engagement 1. Manager William A. Brady has surrounded Miss George with a capable company, and the central character is one well suited to her methods and personality. William Collier gave a special performance of "The Patriot" on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 26, for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America.

BOSTON (Frohman & Harris, mgrs.)—"Three Twins," with Clifton Crawford and Bessie McCoy, commenced its fifth week Nov. 1. A professional matinee was given on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 28, and the companies playing here last week were well represented.

PARK (Frohman, Rich & Harris, mgrs.)—"A Gentleman from Mississippi" began its seventh week 1. Capacity houses welcome Thomas A. Wise and Douglas Fairbanks every night. The other members of the company are: Ogden Stevens, Ernest Baxter, Stanhope Wheatcroft, W. J. Brady, Dewitt Newing, Frederick Bock, Charles Chappelle, E. H. Bender, E. J. De Varney, G. H. Palmer, Leon Baker, Donald Mackintire, Henry Gibson, Charles Johnson, Laura Butler, Ruth Shepley, Lola May, Agnes De Lane, Karen Nielson and Lute Adams. Charles D. McCaull is general manager, and Charles D. Wilson manager.

GLOBE (U. S. Amusement Co., mgrs.)—This is the third week of "The Blue Mouse," and business has been excellent since the opening night. Mabel Barrison and Harry Conor have the leading roles.

AMERICAN MUSIC HALL (Wm. Morris, Inc., mgrs.)—Bill for week of 1 includes: Svengali Trio, Boganny Troupe, Al. Dumont and Mlle. Almont, Will Dillon, Emma Krause and her Picks, Marguerite and Adriel, and Anne Blancke and company. Harry Lauder drew packed houses every afternoon and evening last week, and hundreds of people were turned away every night.

KEITH'S (B. F. Keith, mgr.)—Week of 1: Princess Rajah, Nat Wills, Carter De Haven, Jan Rudenyl and company, "The" Quartette, Swan and O'Day, Zara Carmen Trio, and kinetograph. Annette Kellermann's last week was a record breaker as the house was sold out every night. She introduced her mirror dance with great success.

CASTLE SQUARE (John Craig, mgr.)—"A Parisian Romance," with John Craig as Baron Chevrial, is the offering by the stock company for this week. In the production of "Hamlet" last week Mr. Craig, Miss Young and the supporting company gave an excellent performance of the great tragedy.

GRAND OPERA (Geo. W. Magee, mgr.)—The Smart Set, in "His Honor, the Barber," with S. H. Dudley in the leading role, is the attraction week of 1. This is an organization of colored entertainers, and the play is a musical melange. "Arizona" was well acted last week by the following company: Ernest Allen, Clarence Heritage, John Ferris, Sadie Duff, Dorothy Lyon, Julia Morris, Alma Bradley, Edward Farrell, Roy Gordon, John Drury and Frederick Murray.

BOWDOIN SQUARE (G. E. Lothrop, mgr.)—"The Hour of Reckoning," a new play, is this week's offering by the stock company. Sutton Vane's popular play, "The Cotton King," was presented last week, in an adequate manner, by the clever company.

COLUMBIA (Edwards & Farren, mgrs.)—Wine, Woman and Song is the show for week of 1. The leading roles are taken by Kathryn and Violet Pearl, Irene Gregg, June Libby, Lillian Florence, May Martine, Marie Healey, Ethel Norton, Violet Flowers, Sam Goldman, Burt Jack, James Morrison and W. J. Patton. Nov. 8, Sam T. Jack's Own Co.

THE 57th Anniversary Number OF —THE— NEW YORK CLIPPER

WILL BE ISSUED ON

FEBRUARY 19, 1910

REMEMBER

When WE promise you a handsome number, you are sure to get it.

WAIT FOR US

We do not publish a special number during the holidays because at that time the news-stands are loaded down with a vast quantity of special numbers, many of which are of necessity buried.

After all of the Christmas excitement is over, we come out with our ANNIVERSARY NUMBER at a time when we have the field to ourselves, thus insuring our advertising patrons a much larger circulation than would be possible if issued around the holidays. Therefore it will pay you to WAIT FOR US!

No expense will be spared to make it as elaborate and attractive as any of our special numbers previously issued.

A Handsome Engraved Cover Design

is being prepared, which will be richly illuminated in colors, and the illustrations and printing will be of the finest quality. As usual, it will be sold at the regular price of Ten Cents per copy, thus insuring a large circulation. With the exception of the cover pages, no increase will be made in the advertising rates. A limited space will be allotted for

PORTRAITS

As only a limited number can be accepted, priority will be given to the orders first received. All orders must be accompanied by a good photograph (cabinet size), and a biographical sketch of the sender, not exceeding one hundred (100) words. As a great deal of work must be done in advance of the date of issue, all orders and photographs should be sent in as soon as possible.

We wish to impress upon the minds of our patrons the importance of sending in their orders for portraits, or advertising space, at once, in order to give us an opportunity to produce the best results.

PRICES FOR PORTRAITS

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

Size 2⅛ x 3¼ - - - -	$15.00
Size 4 x 4 - - - -	25.00

Rates for advertising are the same as in regular issues.
